CAMPAIGN TO RAISE A $250 SCOUT FUND BEGUN BY COUNCIL

IMPORTANT ACTION FOR BENEFIT OF LOCAL BOY SCOUTS TAKEN AT MEETING LAST NIGHT.

JAEKE FOR POSITION

Of Scout Mater to Devote Entire Time to Work During July and August is Plan Proposed—Dr. Hart on Council.

Action anticipating the employment of a Scout Master to devote his entire time to field work with the local Boy Scouts during the months of July and August, and the providing of equipment for a summer camp, to be in charge of this Scout Master, was taken at the meeting of the council of the Boy Scouts' organization at the office of Marshall P. Richardson last evening.

A campaign was instituted today by the members of the council acting as a committee of the whole to secure $250 which is considered necessary to absolutely insure the plans for the summer as outlined at the meeting.

Jaeke Offers Services.

Scout Master Hans Jaeke, wrote to the council that he would be willing to take charge of the work for the two months for a consideration of some $150. He outlined some of the plans which he had in mind providing the proposition could be carried through and indicated what equipment would be necessary. It was decided by the council that camp equipment for about forty boys would be available. This would require the purchase of twenty small tents (the size of the army "dog tent," two wall tents for the officers and hospital headquarters, and possibly a dining tent. Other supplies would include camp cooking utensils and other equipment. It was understood that the boys would furnish their own knives and forks, spoons and plates, also their provisions for a two or three day period.

To Solicit Funds.
According to the action taken last night Messrs. Richardson and Hansen, president and secretary respectively of the local council, were empowered to make tentative arrangements with "Captain" Jaeke to engage his services for the period in question providing the money can be raised.

As far as raising the money is concerned the members of the council were quite optimistic. Several of the members stated that they were confident that the business men of the city would lend their financial support to so worthy a cause and several men, it was said, had previously offered money for the cause should it ever be needed.

It was decided to begin the collection of funds at once each member of the council doing what he could in the matter. Each was supplied with subscription list blanks this morning, and a blank was left at each of the newspaper offices, the Recorder and the Gazette, where persons may leave donations should they not be favored from a call by one of the Scout commissioners.

Permanent Meeting Place.

Several other matters of importance were decided at the council meeting. Among them was the appointment of a committee composed of David Atwood and Dr. Buckmaster to interview the Mayor and Council of the city, to ask them for the use of the assembly room in the city hall as a place of meeting for the scouts at a regular stated night each week.

It was thought that if such an arrangement could be made, much more effective work could be done as the boys would always know on what night a meeting was to be held and the Scout Masters could enforce attendance. One of the handicaps during the past winter has been the fact that the Spanish War Veterans' hall was not at the disposal of the Scouts on any regular date. Consequently the boys never knew definitely when any meeting was to be held, the attendance was consequently poor and the work of the organization throughout the winter dangerously hampered.

Dr. Hart on Council.

An important election to the membership of the Scout council was made last night to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of H. G. Goodin. By the unanimous vote of the members present Dr. H. J. Hart was named for the place. Dr. Hart has been keenly interested in the work of the Scouts here since their organization and will be a strong member of the council. He is also interested in out-of-door life and sport and can give valuable assistance to the Scout Masters.

The council also voted that one of their members be present at each of the weekly meetings of the Scouts at least for part of the meeting and give a short talk to the boys. Francis C. Grant offered to talk to the boys on the native trees of his region, and other members of the council will give interesting talks.

To Address Scouts.

M. P. Richardson was selected to attend the Scout meeting at the Spanish War Veterans' hall this evening. At this time he will outline the plans of the Scout organization for the summer as determined at the council meeting.

Other suggestions as to the address to the boys were made among which it was advised to secure H. L. Skavlen to talk to the Scouts on birds from the collection in the library and also on another occasion to talk on Indian lore and arrow heads.

The regular work of the Scouts for the spring and summer will be started with the meeting for re-organization tonight. Scout Masters Jaeke and Hookout are planning to divide the boys into two camp troops, one for the larger and another for the smaller fellows. Each troop will be given special drills and exercises and it is certain that much better results will be obtained than formerly. The older boys will be trained in such a way that they may later be trusted with some of the work of training the younger troop. "This will facilitate matters to a great extent and tend to make the Scout organization self-perpetuating."

FINANCIAL BRICKS

It really doesn't make much difference when you come to discuss the allied bricks of finance, whether they are gold bricks, copper bricks, or zinc bricks; most of them are bricks made without the straw of DETERMINED VALUE. They are light enough to FLOAT like the airy buildings of poetic fancy. They float; but never into the strong boxes of the leaders of the world's business and finance. There is but one standard of investment and that is KNOWN VALUE. The standard is that men and women of small competency are led to invest their savings in these bricks. The safety of principle is the most serious consideration. There are many good and safe investments on the market with bonds as the standard. Better be safe than sorry.

Young Toro, the Jap fighter, has been compelled to retire from the ring on account of the many beatings he has received.

Toro was one of those brave boys willing to take a wallop to get one over himself. Where he made his mistake was that all the wallops he took landed on one person, while the ones he got over were widely distributed.

Where, or where, has One Round Hogan?

Punk, eh? All right, try this one: "Why is Punkie McFarland like a convict?"

Harry Davis ought to strengthen the Cleveland team a lot, now that he has made up his mind to hold down the first basing job himself. Speaking of baseball's horrors—we were, you know, when we were discussing Callahan yesterday—Harry can see the ancient Jimmy and go him two or three better when it comes down to a matter of years. He's thirty-nine, is the Nap boss, but for all that he's still in the ring, as he showed folks last fall when Jack McInnes, Connie Mack's kid first baseman, was laid up on the eve of the world's series. And he's a wise old bird, if there ever was one.

Charlie Dryden, the baseball writer, has a scheme for capturing the Allen gang.

"Send Ted Sullivan after them," advises Charlie. "He has dug more disreputable characters out of the bushes than anyone else in the world."

Jack Johnson has gone the way of all good prize-fighters. Like Jeffries and the rest, he has bought a saloon. It's in Chicago.

Which brings us to the end of another day's work.

They're doping Hughie McEgan, the lightweight champion of Australia, as the man who's going to knock Ad. Wolcott with the plank when Ad's time comes. Champions can't last forever, you know, and if the stories from the athletes are true, McEgan is fit right now to make the Cadillac wildest step at a mighty fast clip to win.

"He's a rugged and clever mixer," says Frank Pinto, the Los Angeles pug, who is just back from Australia. "He hits well with both hands—hard enough to stop almost anybody—and he's game, well-seasoned, and cool when he's in action."

Pinto ought to know something about it. He fought McEgan four times while abroad, losing a twenty-round decision to him in each instance.

In the spring of 1909 the Italian boxer Wolcott a ten-round no-decision battle at Los Angeles, so he knows, too, something about what the American champion can do.

It's about time Australia was coming to bat with a real fighter. The country has furnished a lot of them to the world in the past. There was Bob Fitzsimmons, the wonderful Cornishman, Peter Jackson, Young Griffo, and a lot of other warriors. If McEgan is of the same calibre, it looks as though the title might slip out of the grip of the old U. S. A.

TWO AMATEUR CLUBS WILL OPEN SEASON

Pirates and Cardinals Will Play Their First Game of Season Sunday Afternoon.

The baseball season will be opened in real earnest in this city tomorrow afternoon when the Pirates and Cardinals will engage in their first game at Athletic Park. Both of the teams will be strong contenders for the city championship series which will be played later in the season and both are out after the honors for the Southern part of the state in their class.

The other Evansville teams which promise to make the baseball season lively are the Athletics and the White Sox who met in the first game two weeks ago in which the Athletics were defeated by a narrow margin. The Athletics have had negotiations with an Afton team for a game tomorrow but it is uncertain whether the game will be played. The Pirates-Cardinals game is a certainty, however, and in the event of a double header they will occupy the diamond in the initial slug-fest.

The managers of the teams who play tomorrow, Connors for the Cardinals and Mantel for the Pirates, are confident of the prowess of their teams. The Pirates are boosted as genuine sluggers with the ability to solve the most complicated curves. The Cardinals are also advanced as the real terrors with the bat and may spring some surprises. The probable line-up Sunday afternoon will be as follows: Pirates—Nehr, catcher; Cantwell or Huggs, pitcher; Moore, short stop; Muenchow, 1st base; Killy, 2nd base; Fleming, 3rd base; Otto, left field; Berger, center field; Mantel, right field. Cardinals—Wilson, catcher; Connell, pitcher; Cronin, short stop; Connors, 1st base; Sullivan, 2nd base; Ryan, 3rd base; Korst, left field; Cronin, center field; Jones, right field.

The Pirates and the Cardinals probably will not play again this season until some time in July. Both teams have secured a number of games with outside teams. The Pirates have engaged games with the following teams at Detroit: North End, Young Nationals, White Sox, Ironville, and Collie Hill Eagles. Detroit's ability to raise ball teams seems to be unlimited but their quality remains to be tested which the Evansville boys are sure to do. They are sure to show up the weak end points.

Other teams, which Evansville aggregations will play this season include: Jefferson, Edgerton, Broadhead, Evansville, Avalon, Clinton, Milton and Monroe.

ish on either side, the result being in doubt until the end of the game had been declared. Kelly starred for the Forum team, bringing in three runs in the first inning, and playing a fast, heady game through the remaining nine. For the Bank boys the best work was done by Edler, who was in the game every minute and proved a formidable adversary with the stick as well as with the glove. The teams lined up as follows:

Bank featherweight boxer, has been engaged by the management of the Evansville Athletic club to stage a four-round exhibition contest with a Milwaukee lad at the boxing match to be held at the Evansville auditorium on Monday evening, May 6th. Walsh's appearance here is an additional attraction which will meet with the enthusiastic approval of the local fans who will see some of the fine points of the game demonstrated by this clever little boxer.

The rest of the card as announced by Matchmaker Hockett remains the same. The Morehead-Singer 10-round go at 142 pounds is predicted to be the most interesting bout of the evening. Harrison and Nearing will be closely matched, however, and will mix it with determination in an eight-round mill.

Evans (Kid) De Munn of Belvidere, who is a local favorite, is matched with Jack Craft of Madison in the second preliminary, which will not be the least interesting bout of the evening. A local lad who goes by the name of Kid Sharkey and Ted Young of Milwaukee are matched for a six-round first preliminary. A square deal is assured for all the contestants with Jack Dougherty of Madison as referee.

WEATHER FORECAST.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

With flags at half mast and an atmosphere of mourning, the city of New York today expresses her sorrow for the loss of the Titanic, which comes to the city as a personal loss, because so many of the victims of the ill-fated ship were citizens of the great metropolis.

The gaiety of "the great white way"—the theatre district between Thirty-fourth and Forty-sixth streets, where night is turned into day and life is at full tide after midnight—is less boisterous than common, for every playhouse has contributed to the benefit fund for the survivors, while the extras issued every hour by the papers serve as a constant reminder of the great disaster.

Down at the lower end of the island, where the shipping offices are located, great crowds of people throng the streets and Broadway, in front of the "White Star Line" building, presents a pathetic sight, for here the mourners gather, hoping against hope for tidings of loved ones. These are the people whose names do not appear in print, for their friends were in the steerage and second-class cabins, but they suffer just as keenly.

An English maid was one of the most pathetic figures. Her lover came across a year ago and secured employment as a shipping clerk. A few weeks ago, he sent his sweetheart money to join him, and she sailed on the Titanic. He supposed she was lost, as her name did not appear among the list of survivors, but she was there, more dead than alive, and too exhausted to tell her story. Hospital care brought her back to consciousness, willing hands supplied the lost trousseau and wardrobe, the lover was found and the happy couple united.

The passenger list of the ship which went down in two miles of water, included the names of twenty-eight girls who were coming to America on a similar mission, but they never arrived, and the boys who were waiting for them are among the thousands of mourners in the Battery district where the steerage passengers arrive.

The names of Strauss and Astor, of New York, and a dozen other men who were prominent in social and commercial circles, and whose loss is keenly felt by the city, have filled the public prints, ever since the wireless message flashed the sad announcement of the disaster, and it is proper to pay tribute to these people who filled so large a place in the great city's life, but the fact should not be overlooked that over at Ellis island, the home of the steerage passengers, are groups of mourners entitled to every sympathy.

that seven hundred lives were saved. This could not have happened but for the quiet sea. With the water at a temperature of thirty, life could not long endure the exposure.

Only a glimpse of the spirit of heroism which prevailed, has been granted, and the full story will never be written. The little band of men, looking death in the face, but standing by to cheer and comfort the little company in their dire extremity, were heroes of which humanity may be proud, and all about them were brave hearts who met their fate with sublime courage.

This mixed company of people from many lands and of many creeds, met sudden death on the open sea, that fateful night, like brothers and sisters of one common family, inspired by faith and comforted by the universal hope of immortality.

The accident which caused the loss of the Titanic will not soon be repeated, for the lesson has been a profound impression. Had the liner been equipped with searchlights the accident would have been avoided, and if caution had been observed the danger might have been averted.

Every life boat in New York has been picked up during the last week, and every outgoing ship is being fully equipped for emergencies. It is safe to say that more attention will be given to safety in the future.

"WIMMIN' FIRST."

I never took no stock in preachers— Neither agreed nor disagreed With what the parson allows teach us Believin' good us every creed. With their tales us hell's eternal fires; En' heaven's everlastin' glory; En' Valhalla for our warrior sires; En' Nirvana us Brannin' story.

But I reckon that's a place for all, Who've made their last exit— For him who never didn't fall; For him who braved en' fit. En' manly men, en' cowards, too, Us every tongue en' creed Will go there when his life is through En' be weighed by every deed.

En' I reckon that's a special place, Made recent by the Lord, For them folks who, up at Cape Race, Showed that breadin' en' their blood, I've heered some tales th' very worst Of the men up there that gave Their lives for saviors' wimmin' first. But like men they met th' wave.

En' I reckon that's another place, An' kinder lowdown here— For him who'll one day say for face Th' brave claim by th' sea. They'll speak no word—a silent look Will make him cringe en' cower— She'll be that, whose place he took That he must live his little hour.

En' a place for him? I reckon so— That's only a few us his kind— He saved his hide, but'll allow know He left a woman behind. Th' joys he'll reap in this short span Will be mackerles he'll find. Dejected by self en' by his fellowman, 'Cause he left a woman behind.

Brave men with a smile death met, He had saved th' wimmin' first. Th' coward a woman's place did get; Nor headed as he was cursed. He'll often start in th' dead of night, En' fear'll grip his throat— Th' world en' all 't about with might, 'Twix a woman's place in th' boat!

At the Theatre

MUTT AND JEFF.
At Myers Theatre Saturday, April 27, Mat. and evening, the latest musical comedy in three acts, "Mutt and Jeff" will be the attraction. The production is under the direction of Gus Hill, the prominent New York manager. "Mutt and Jeff," as is universally known, are those two comical creations of Bud Fisher, the clever cartoonist. This is the first time that the pair have adorned the stage and from all accounts they are adorning their new environment with flying colors. The comedy has a plot in which the interest is sustained from start to finish. It concerns a valuable grant of land left by an American to his son, Jack Weyler, who goes to a South American Republic to claim it. This naturally brings the central characters "Mutt and Jeff" to a strange country. A revolution is in progress and the two jump into the fray for all the goods that there is in it. Of course they do not succeed in getting any real money but they do get into trouble. "Mutt and Jeff" is made up of a series of sketches, each of which carries its own humor with the dignity befitting its reputation. "Jeff" is made his cabinet, whatever that may be, and the two are free from strife and annoyance until their imposition

Hypnotic power is possessed by only a few persons but its peculiar influence has been partially explained by psychologists as the work of suggestion. Seemingly impossible things are accomplished by the favored few who have hypnotic control and their feats are always attractive to the general public. The Macks Hypnotic company which will be at the Myers theatre throughout next week promises to give some of the latest things in hypnotism and announce programs of a highly entertaining character. Among other things they promise to hypnotize a young man by long distance telephone so that he will sleep for fifty hours.

SPLENDID PROGRAM

FOR LADIES' NIGHT

Arrangements Being Made for Ladies' Night Meeting of Social Union

Club Tuesday Night.

Special preparations for the Ladies' Night meeting of the Social Union club, which will be held Tuesday evening, are being made by a committee of the club headed by D. D. Manross. Special plans have been made for the affair, which will be held at the Y. M. C. A. building, and the banquet this year will be equal if not superior to any that have been given before. The auditorium of the association is being decorated and other pleasurable features will be carried out. The program for the entertainment following the dinner will not be announced until the members and their lady friends take their places around the tables, but it is understood some new numbers have been arranged for—after-dinner toasts, musical numbers and a reading. The Rev. E. O. Hoffmeister will be toastmaster.

REYNOLDS AND POLICEMEN DISAGREE IN ACCOUNTS

Reynolds Though Brought to Station by Two Policemen, Says He Was Not Really Drunk.

Conflicting accounts were given in the municipal court this morning when Edward Reynolds was arraigned on a charge of drunkenness. Reynolds, though contending to enter a plea of guilty, maintained that he was not really drunk, that he was arrested in front of the Karberg saloon, and that he walked to the station without assistance. The police account is that Reynolds was picked up in the alley at the rear of the saloon and carried to the police station by two officers. Reynolds was sentenced to three days in jail and $1.00 fine and costs or two additional days.

George Kihuefeld, arrested for a similar offense, was sentenced to ten days in jail, but was promised his liberty if he made arrangements with his parish priest to take the pledge.

The hall will be beautifully decorated for the party and everything done which will add to the pleasure of the occasion has been done by the committee in charge.

Training Nurses—Free Scholarships—Increased Earning Power.

The Philadelphia School for Nurses, 2219 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, announces that excellent for the fall classes will begin shortly. This institution is recognized and endorsed by leading physicians everywhere. Free scholarships in the two year course are available and provide room, board, laundering, incidental expenses and railroad fare home on completion of the course. A home study course and a resident short course are also provided. The school provides full instruction under soft and wholesome conditions and opens the way to almost immediate financial betterment for those who need to increase their earning power.

A special short course class opens October 3rd. This class is formed at the request of leading physicians who are anxious that some provision be made to meet the increasing demand for nurses in all sections. This is an opening which will be appreciated by those who need to quickly prepare themselves for self-support and nursing duty. An illustrated number of the school bulletin, which is sent free to interested persons, gives all the details.

BIG MEDAL CONTEST

HELD LAST EVENING

High School Pupils Strive for Medals in Many Lines—Beloit Meet

Last Night—Beloit Meet Wednesday.

Good form, well chosen topics and excellent interpretation marked the eighth annual medal contest at the High School last evening which was held before a large audience.

With interest and attention of their audience throughout, their selections in a manner which speaks well for the material in the high school this year.

The poem of Miss Irene Lewis entitled "In The Springtime," received the Mahoney medal for poetry honor.

able mention being made of production of Miss Florence Hogoboom. In the absence of Miss Lewis the winning poem was read by Mr. Duell.

"The Battle of Gettysburg," as delivered by Lewis French won the highest honors in the oratorical contest his delivery being of remarkable power and vividness. So realistic was the terrible scene of the battle made that the audience was held breathless during the entire oration.

Although but a beginner in the art of public speaking Stanley Howard the second speaker delivered his oration on "The Nation's Greatest Need" with considerable force and excellent expression.

One of the most interesting as well as one of the most trying contests of the evening was the extemporaneous speaking for the Recorder medal.

Four people participated in this, all speaking on subjects drawn from a list of sixteen a short time before their appearance on the stage. These topics were given them several days ago that they might look them up but they were not assigned until last evening.

The efforts of the contestants under the difficult situation were very commendable and the speeches were to the point and interesting.

In this line of work Miss Elsie Davis proved the most proficient her delivery of "The Lawrence Strike" being of a high character and the medal being granted to her unanimously by the judges.

"The Recall of the Judges" was delivered by Allen Dorn, born was awarded second place for the able manner in which he treated the subject.

Following a selection by the High School orchestra the participants in the declamation contest for the Loomis medal were called upon.

This contest proved to be one of the closest, which has ever been held since the medal was offered, and the audience was almost evenly divided on the question while awaiting the decision of the judges. Three of the four members of the Freshman class entered for declamations were given places by the judges, only one member of the Senior class taking part.

Miss Jessie George was awarded the Loomis medal for her declamation "The Prisoner's Statement."

Second place was given to Marlon Fletcher who chose the selection "The Honor of the Woods." Miss Evelyn Welch taking third place by her presentation of "The Freckled Samaritan."

The medal will remain in the possession of the winner until the contest next year shall decide who is the next holder.

Lewis French and Miss Evelyn Welch will represent the local high school in the dual meet with Beloit, which is to be held here in the high school auditorium.

In this, a very interesting evening, May first, this meet was also to have been held in Beloit but they were unable to secure speakers in time. In this next meet with Beloit the speakers who will be asked to represent Janesville at the White-water Normal meet next Friday night will be chosen.

ROVING NEGRESSES GIVEN TICKETS FOR DEPARTURE

Professed to Be Looking for Work, Cut Actions Belied Professions—Sent to Milwaukee.

Two negroes who have been loitering about the city were put on board a train for Milwaukee at 10:35 this morning by the police and given instructions to keep away from Janesville. One was arrested last night and locked up in the police station by Officer Morrissey. The other hearing of her companion's predicament, came to visit her this morning and was also locked up. Both claimed to be in search of work but during their stay in the city had shown no disposition to secure it. One had just enough to buy a ticket to Milwaukee and her companion was furnished the necessary sum by Poor Commissioner Anderson.

LOCAL AUTOMOBILE AGENT MAKES RECORD IN SALES.

Quite a record for sales in the automobile business has been made by J. A. Strimling of this city, local agent for the Mitchell cars. In one month and ten days Mr. Strimling booked orders for eighteen cars of the make he represents, and was making deliveries on his cars as quickly as he could get them from the factory. Mr. Strimling has taken over the garage business of Grover Horn on North River street, and has located his agency and is conducting the garage business in the building formerly occupied by Mr. Horn.

Speaking of his success Mr. Strimling said: "Business has been very good this far in the season, and the prospects are for a large number of sales yet to be made."

MYERS' BAR PROPRIETOR CHARGES PLEA TO GUILTY.

Admits Violation of Ordinance For Sunday Closing—Fined Twenty-five Dollars and Costs.

The first conviction resulting from the efforts of the new city administration to enforce the Sunday closing ordinance was made this morning when Attorney T. S. Nolan, counsel for the proprietor of the Myers home bar, appeared before Judge Fifield and asked to change the plea of "not guilty" entered to the charge of a violation on April 14, to "guilty."

On the plea of the defendant Judge Fifield imposed the minimum fine of twenty-five dollars and costs which was paid. City Attorney W. H. Dougherty appeared for the prosecution.

DECIDES THAT LEASE

WAS NOT FORFEITED

Judge Fifield Rules for Defendant in Case of J. W. Peters versus Frank P. Croak et al.

Following the arguments of the attorneys in the case of J. W. Peters versus Frank P. Croak et al., brought by the plaintiff, Mr. Peters, to force the vacation of the American House property by the defendants on the ground of a violation of lease, Judge Fifield this morning ruled that the evidence showed no violation, and directed that the plaintiff be taxed the costs of the action. Attorney Charles Pierce appeared for the plaintiff, and M. O. Mount for the defendant. The taking of testimony was concluded earlier in the week.

Attorney Pierce contended that the evidence showed the building was not used as a boarding house or hotel as the terms of the lease permitted; that the Austrians who occupied rooms in the building did housekeeping there in violation of the terms of the lease. He maintained that the owner of the building has a legal right to prohibit the manner in which it is to be used and that using it in a manner not intended by the lease constituted a violation of the lease.

The roomers he said had also used a gasoline stove violating the provisions of the lease and that this had been the source of the fire.

Attorney Mount declared that the lease terms do not provide for a forfeiture except in case of failure to pay rent or express violation of its terms. This could take place only by the permission of practices expressly prohibited or of provisions prescribing for certain purposes only. He maintained that the evidence showed the fire did not start from a gasoline stove, that the tenants had on the command of Mr. Hoder, quit using one before the time of the fire and put in coal stoves. As to repairs he declared that the premises were the worse only for fire and the elements, the responsibility for which did not fall on the lessee. He alleged that Mr. Peters, by accepting payments of rent, and agreeing to make repairs, had waived rights claimed. These statements were disputed by Atty. Pierce in his reply.

The decision will indefinitely delay the extensive improvements in the building which Mr. Peters contemplates. The building at the present time is very much in need of repair and remodeling. It is an old structure wanting modern conveniences and only the first floor is now being actually occupied. Mr. Peters will appeal from the decision and carry the case up to the Circuit Court.

Mr. Peters stated this morning that he had an opportunity to lease the entire building July 1 and if the present decision had not been rendered he would have started repairs at once. It is unfortunate that a delay in improving the property has been caused as the structure has long been known as a fire trap and is most unsanitary.

HELPER'S SERVICES

Gust Fiedler, of Fulton, Suing George Oakley, Charging Lateral With Enticing Away Hired Man.

A simple-minded hired man, alleged to have been easily persuaded to leave one position for another, is the cause of a disension in a civil action for damages brought by Gust Fiedler against George Oakley, both of Fulton, for $200 damages for the loss of the services of Elmer Fredendall. The case was called in Justice Stanley D. Tallman's court this morning and by consent of the attorneys was adjourned to May 15.

The case is a peculiar one. In the complaint filed in the case by Mr. Fiedler's attorney, M. P. Richardson, it is stated that Fredendall was enticed to leave the service of Fiedler by Oakley. When the case was called today, a counter claim was filed by E. D. McGowan, Mr. Oakley's attorney, asserting that Fredendall had been hired by Oakley for six months' service, previous to the time he went to work for Fiedler. It is stated that Oakley will also ask damages of Fiedler. The case gives promise of developing into a fine little neighborhood row.

Case Before Justice Lange.
A judgment of $5.77 in favor of H. Person, who brought action against E. C. Lindstrom was rendered this morning when the case came up for trial in Justice Charles Lange's court. Two garnishes actions, of C. Fredendall against John Haffrey, and of Margaret Walrath versus John Erdman, were adjourned one week to allow the railroad companies to put in an answer. The civil suit of C. E. Barker versus J. Sullivan was also adjourned one week.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Joseph Zillinger.

A message was received this morning by Edward J. Schmiedley announcing the death of his cousin, Mrs. Joseph Zillinger, which occurred in Chicago yesterday.

Mrs. Zillinger was a niece of Mrs. Mary Schmiedley of this city. To mourn her loss are a husband and three small children. The funeral will take place Monday morning at nine o'clock from St. Mary's Catholic church, Chicago.

Janesville Man's Experience With Famous Eagle Regiment

Veteran of the Civil War, in which he served as member of the famous Eighth Wisconsin regiment, the "Old Abe," or "Eagle" regiment, J. L. Bear, of this city, has a wide and varied experience in warfare. After being mustered out of service in the Union army, he enlisted in the regular army, served three years, and was afterwards a member of the various military companies in this city. His military services extended over a period of eighteen years.

A history of his experiences in the Civil War was written by Mr. Bear, and was read before a meeting of the W. H. Sargent Post, G. A. R., of this city some years ago. His story, taken from this manuscript, is interesting to all old soldiers. His story is as follows:

"August 11, 1862, I enlisted under Lieutenant Charles P. King, in Company G, Eighth Wisconsin Regiment. He was at that time on recruiting service preparatory to joining the regiment, which was then at Tusculum,

JOSEPH L. BEAR

Alabama. In a few days we were sent south by way of Cairo.

We had passenger coaches as far as Cairo; then we got aboard a Mississippi steamer and went to Columbia, Kentucky, a distance of twenty-five miles. Here we reported to the provost marshal and he assigned us quarters for the night in an old store, with instructions to take the first freight train out in the morning. We did as we were ordered and took passage on the hurricane deck, carrying no arms of any kind.

Our line of travel was through the enemy's country, which was infested with bushwhackers, and during our trip we were shot at several times, but no damage was done. When we arrived at Tusculum we found the Eighth in camp. We were introduced to our superiors, and assigned to our quarters. The day after our arrival we were ordered to be ready at five o'clock the next morning to march. And you all know what that means—revolt at three o'clock or three-fifths. We started on time, as ordered. It was dry and hot, and my first day's march with a big knapsack (I will say right here that I unloaded some of that load before night) and to help matters along, I broke my shoe string on my new big blister soon formed on my foot, which was no improvement on my walking capacity.

We went into camp along toward night, and when we had stacked arms the first sergeant made a detail for guard to report at headquarters at once, and to him I reported. The first name that was read was that of Private J. L. Bear. I made a kick, but it was of no use. I reported with the others at headquarters and was put on camp guard. The next morning, however, I reported at sick call and got a ride in a covered wagon on a lot of camp equipment, but I was glad to get that. I was pretty sore and tired, and anything less than walking.

We went to Buzzards' Roost, Miss., and finally brought up at Iuka, Miss., on the eighteenth day of September, 1862. Here we (the recruits) had our baptism of fire. Our regiment supported the Second Iowa battery and lay under the brow of a hill. Our casualties were small.

The battle of Iuka was fought mostly by regiments of small arms, as the artillery could not be used to any extent because of the timber. The Eleventh Ohio, Sand's Battery, was taken and retaken several times, and Col. Fox gave this battery as number one in the list of losses.

After this engagement we followed General Price and Van Dorn into a distance, and finally halted at Herculano, ten miles south of Corinth, about the first of October. On the evening of the second we were ordered to break camp, as the Rebels were to the east and in the west of us, and we were to get up near to Corinth. We marched most of the night in getting there and went into camp on Tishomingo Creek. We lay in camp there until the afternoon of the third, when we were ordered to fall in, double quick.

Starting on a gallop, we kept it up for half a mile until we came to a rail fence where orders were given to throw our knapsacks in the fence corners. We all did so, with the exception of one man, William Frank, and when night came he was the only one that had a knapsack. When he unrolled his blanket he found a minute ball in it, and, as for my knapsack, I was glad I lost it, for I had no use for one after that. A rubber blanket and a wooden blanket, carried over one shoulder, was all the baggage I carried after losing my knapsack.

After we had lost our knapsacks, we marched by the left flank, and there we received the first impression we had of getting into a fight. We received a broadside of musketry, which wounded thirteen of our company.

This was the opening of the battle of Corinth, October 3, about four o'clock in the afternoon. Our command was placed in the battle front and the order given: "Forward; guide center." And talk about careless fellows. The Rebels certainly beat anything I ever met. They were shooting here and there, and the iron and lead was falling thick and fast. We drove them back at first, but while another part of their force was coming at our rear. Then the order was given for us to fall back under cover of Forts Robinson and Williams. You talk about sprinters, I think I was the best in the whole army of twenty-three thousand men, commanded by Rosecrans.

We were now on the defensive, but night soon called the battle off, leaving the enemy in the place where we had left our knapsacks, so the best thing we could do was to lay on our stomachs, which were not very full. Night soon passed and at an early hour the enemy commenced to shell the town, dropping some of their shells into the hospital building and killing some of the wounded there. When daylight came they made preparations for an assault along the whole line and about two o'clock of the morning of October 4 the combined forces of Price, Van Dorn and Villapague were drawn up in line and on they came, led by Col. Rogers of the Texas Legions.

During the night we were moved to the left of the forts, and on skirmish line, so we were in a good position to view the panorama. On the Rebels came, the lines drew under a heavy rain of artillery, the infantry reserving their fire until at close range. Then the roar of musketry was deafening. Col. Rogers was killed about one hundred yards from Robinson. He was buried where he fell, but his remains were afterwards removed to his home in Texas.

The Rebels charged, were driven back, reformed, and came again, only to be driven back again. Finally on the third and last charge they reached the ditch and a few gained the parapets and inside of the fort, only to be driven back again. So ended the battle of Corinth, October 3 and 4, 1862.

The Rebels commenced a retreat at once, followed close by our cavalry, and the next morning we started in pursuit. We were gone a few days and then returned to help bury the dead.

After this we were stationed along the Memphis and Charleston and Mississippi railroad, doing duty to keep the road in operation. In November we took part in the invasion of Mississippi. And through our Col. Murphy, commanding the post at Holly Springs, (who had the One Hundred and First Illinois regiment with him) he surrendered to General Van Dorn and they burned all the government supplies and paroled officers and men. So we went back to guarding the railroad until the spring of 1863 when we went to Memphis, unloading on a transport for Duckett and Young's Point, opposite Vicksburg, to help Grant dig the canal. This was a failure, as by the time we had it completed, the river receded and the canal was high and dry.

So one dark night, the 15th of April, we ran the batteries with what transports we wanted, without the loss of a boat. On the second of May Grant's army started for the rear of Vicksburg and crossed the river at Grand Gulf. At Jackson on May 11 we went in and helped ourselves to anything we wanted—clothing, tobacco, wine, etc. Then we came back and took our place in line and awaited for an invitation from General Pemberton, C. S. A., to be his guests in the city. But he did not give it. So on the twenty-second day of May General Grant decided to go, anyway, and was, as you all know, repulsed after sacrificing a good lot of men. This was one of Grant's mistakes.

After the assault we were transferred to Young's Point, across the river to prevent any co-operation from Rebels in the Trans-Mississippi department and to keep any from leaving Vicksburg. I was detailed to help man a mortar boat. The job was not a snap. I served ten days and was satisfied.

On the fourth of July our army marched into the city and we went into camp east of the city—Camp Sherman. We rested up and then we were marching here and there and all over the country. The winter of 1862-63 we were stationed at Salisbury, Tenn., guarding the M. and C. R. R. line.

In the spring of 1863 we were loaned to General Banks to go up the Red River to help Banks get cotton. We went aboard transport, rode on ship to Shreveport and marched overland to Port De Ruisey, a distance of forty miles. We made the march before sundown and stopped two hours to build a bridge. Then we captured the fort and most of the garrison. The next day we celebrated the arrival of General Banks' forces from New Orleans.

When they arrived Banks sent our division, commanded by General Joe Mansour, out twenty-five miles to Henderson Hill to capture an outpost. We went and relieved the Rebels' picket posts and captured the whole garrison without firing a shot. General Dick Taylor was in command. The next day we escorted back a battery of artillery and two thousand infantry. We had a fine time. It rained most of the time that we were on the march.

From there we went to Grand Ecore, La., and then the Thirtieth and Nineteenth Corps started for Shreveport. We (the Sixteenth Army Corps) remained at Grand Ecore until Banks got mixed up at Sabine Crossroads.

This day Banks had the wagon train and the artillery in advance, and they were stampeded. Most of the wagons were lost as well as the Chicago Mercantile Battery. The Thirtieth and Nineteenth Corps held the enemy until the Sixteenth Corps, which was then sixty-five miles away, arrived. We arrived late in the afternoon and formed a line on the brow of Pleasant Hill, with the artillery hidden. Then the Thirtieth and Nineteenth Corps fell back, closely pursued. After they had cleared our line, on came the Johnnies, with their old, familiar yell. When they were close to our line we gave them a volley of musketry and artillery. They turned and went the other way and you could not see them for the dust they kicked up.

We charged them for about two miles; then darkness set in and we laid down on our arms for the night. About eleven p. m. General Banks ordered a general retreat. Both armies were whipped, we fleeing in one direction and they in an opposite. We returned to Alexandria where we lay about ten days and helped Col. Bailey build a dam to get the gunboats over the rapids. All this time we were annoyed more or less by the Johnnies. After getting the fleet off, we retreated down the river. Our delay at Alexandria brought the Johnnies back, and they gave us a fight at every opportunity. At Cloutiersville, or "Mansura Prairie," we had a fight out in the open field. You could see every man in both armies. An advanced the enemy fell back and finally withdrew.

We came on down to Yellow Bayou where we were to cross the river, cut all of the wagons over and went into camp. Again the Rebels charged us, but they got the worst of the fight and pulled away. From here we went up the river to Great Bend where General Mansour had blockaded the river. We landed and marched out to Lake Chicot where we had quite a fight. After the Johnnies pulled off, we again embarked and traveled up to Memphis.

About this time General Sturgis had been defeated at Guntown by General Forrest, and the Union forces had been reinforced by troops of the One Hundred Day service. We were sent after Forrest and found him at Tupelo. We changed him out and he pulled around and slipped on the One Hundred Day men at Memphis. We remained in Memphis until ordered to go and drive Pop Price out of Missouri. After we completed this job we were sent to the relief of Nashville and we were in the fight on the 15th and 16th of December, 1863. Here is where Lieutenant W. H. Sargent, in honor of whom this Post was named, was killed on the 16th. He was one of the best men I ever met.

After the battle of Nashville we went to Eastport and remained there about six weeks. At this camp our daily allowance was one ear of corn to subsist on. I had some queer feelings. I can assure you, I was young and growing, and my appetite I had with me at all times. From here, as soon as the river opened, we went south again. And when we got to Cairo we ranacked the town. We were naked and hungry, and had no money to buy with, so we had to steal. And steal we did. The brigade was court-martialed for stealing, but the findings were disproved of by that grand old man, General A. J. Smith.

We finally landed at Dauphin Island in Mobile Bay and took an active part in the siege of Spanish Fort and Blakeley. After this we went to Uniontown, Alabama and remained there until sent home to be mustered out. I remained at home until May 4, 1866 and then enlisted in Company A, Third United States Infantry, for three years' service. I was stationed at Fort Dodge, Kansas. The duties were fighting Indians and guarding overland merchant trains. After my return from the regulars I became a member of the state militia and belonged to the Flower City Rifles. When they were disbanded I was transferred to the Janesville Guards, and later was a member of the Light Infantry. My service extends over a period of eighteen years."

"Twenty-Five"

STANDARD MODEL

F. O. B. Detroit.

Fully equipped with top, windshield, generator, lamps, horn, tools and kit, but without self-starter and other special features of Model SF. Specifications are the same.

Power in a motor-car means one of two things, according to point of view.

To the speed-maniac or the racer, careless of tire-wear or upkeep expense, it may mean a hundred miles an hour—between breakdowns.

To the average motorist, it means road ability sufficient to take the car and its load at good speed, in any kind of going. It means ease in hill-climbing. It means the greatest number of miles per gallon of fuel, with the minimum of wear on tires and mechanism.

That is the kind of power the R-C-H gives you. The long-stroke motor develops the maximum of power per fuel unit; the entire construction has been designed to utilize this power with a minimum of waste; there is no surplus weight on the car, and the weight has been so distributed as to equalize the strain on all four tires.

Yet the R-C-H will carry you, if you want it, at close to sixty miles an hour.

Equal attention has been paid to comfort, strength and beauty in R-C-H design. Its nearest competitors are found among cars costing $1,500 to $2,000.

Before purchasing a car at the higher figure let us demonstrate the R-C-H to you. See what the extra thousand dollars will buy you that the R-C-H does not afford.

GENERAL R-C-H SPECIFICATIONS—Motor—1 cylinders, cast in bloc—3 1/4 inch bore, 5 inch stroke. Timing gears and valves enclosed. Three point suspension. Drive—Left side, irreversible worm gear, 14 inch wheel. Control—Center lever, operated through 11 plate integral with universal joint housing just below. Springs—Front, semi-elliptic; rear, full elliptic and mounted on swivel seats. Frame—Crossed steel channel. Axles—Front, I-beam, drop forged; rear, semi-floating type. Body—English type, extra wide seats. Wheelbase—110 inches. Full equipment quoted above.

Dauphin Lake Region, Manitoba,
An Ideal Country
For Dairying.

Dairying is profitable in the Dauphin district and the industry is growing, but not fast enough to keep pace with the demand for dairy products. There is no herd law in the district so that cows can run wherever feed is good. Supplementary feed, such as shorts, bran, linseed meal, roots and the like are plenty and cheap. A great advantage that the Dauphin region has over many other sections for dairying is that fodder and alfalfa are raised with great success in all parts of the district. Raising alfalfa has gone far enough to demonstrate the fact that splendid crops of this kind of the legumes can be raised in this part of Manitoba, and fodder corn crops are raised regularly with great success.

This crop, in fact, is one of the heaviest in the district and produces immense yields of excellent fodder for dairying and other purposes. The nearness of so large a city as Winnipeg makes a market for all dairy products that are turned out and leaves the farmer's profit unimpaired by heavy expense charges.

There are also enough creameries and cheese factories in the Dauphin district to make the demand for milk and cream sharp and steady throughout the year. The Dauphin district is well located and well fitted by nature and by having such advantages as population, market and excellent transportation, for carrying on the dairying business.

We have literature giving facts and figures on this district that are amazing. Let us mail it to you—it will be sent on receipt of a post card. Better still, make arrangements to go with us on one of our trips, which we will be making all summer, and see the country for yourself.

LARGER PINEAPPLES ARE OFFERED TODAY

Extra Large Pineapples at 25c Each
 Are Featured Today—Usual Saturday Variety and Specialties.
 Still larger pineapples than those offered yesterday, are seen on the local markets today selling at 25 cents each. These are the Jumbo pineapples and are of more excellent flavor than any which have been for sale here for a long time.

 The usual large supply of vegetables and special ties are seen in the windows of the dealers today in readiness for the Sunday diners, and the most tempting displays are shown on every hand. Fresh shipments of everything are the feature of the Saturday markets usually and today was no exception.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

The storm that was passing through the north central states yesterday has now reached the St. Lawrence valley and New England. It has caused rain pretty generally throughout the East, and in the Ohio valley. The following places report exceptionally heavy rainfalls during the past twenty-four hours, viz: Memphis, 2.44 inches; Knoxville, 1.82 inches; Louisville, 2.10 inches.
 A small area of high atmospheric pressure occupies the Mississippi valley today, and is the source of fair weather in the central states, but another barometric depression is moving in the West, and will probably advance eastward during the next day or two, bringing increasing cloudiness and warmer weather to the central valleys.
 In this vicinity the weather will be fair tonight, and probably Sunday. It is likely to be cold enough for light frost in low places in the morning. It will be warmer Sunday afternoon.

Waiting Until "Bye and Bye" To Get a Home

Is merely another way of saying you never intend to. Right now is the time to enjoy the good things of life. Other people do it. Why not you?

Right now is the time to make up your mind to build. And as soon as you make up your mind to build you should make up your mind to build right. When you get that far we wish to figure your lumber and mill work bill for you. You can't get away from it, good lumber pays.

DON'T BE DECEIVED ON LUMBER PRICES

THERE IS A BIG DIFFERENCE IN BUYING JUST LUMBER AND IN BUYING THE KIND OF LUMBER WE SELL. KEEP YOUR MONEY IN YOUR HOME TOWN, WHERE YOU CAN BUY YOUR LUMBER, LATH, SHINGLES, INTERIOR FINISH, STORM WINDOWS, DOORS, SCREENS, SEWER PIPE, GALVANIZED IRON ROAD CULVERTS, LIME, CEMENT, AND IN FACT, EVERYTHING YOU NEED TO BUILD AND MAINTAIN A HOME, AT LOWER PRICES, QUALITY, FREIGHT AND TEAMING CHARGES TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT, THAN YOU CAN BUY THESE SAME ITEMS FOR, IN ANY OTHER CITY ON EARTH, AND HAVE THEM SHIPPED IN.

8 REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD BUY FROM US

If You Buy Out Of Town
 You pay in advance.
 You buy the goods without seeing them.
 Your money is sent far away.
 You cart the goods from the depot.
 You find that redress is not practicable for unsatisfactory goods.
 You have difficulty with the railroad company if goods are damaged in transportation.
 You pay freight or express charges extra.
 You pay a price that is only apparently low.

If You Buy From Us
 You may receive credit.
 You make actual comparisons and select from a variety of styles and sizes.
 Your money helps to build up your own community.
 You may have the goods delivered to your home.
 The articles are easily exchanged if not satisfactory.
 You will receive them in good condition.
 You have no freight or express charges to pay.
 You get quality goods at right prices.

The Strength of Any Fence depends entirely upon the posts—no does the life. Cedar posts have long been the favorite with people who know. Ours are extremely sound and rot resistant because cut when the sap was down and then water soaked. Look them over and you will be convinced.

Our Advice on Roofing is unprejudiced because we handle not only shingles, but also prepared roofings. The Proper use of either, though, affords careful thought, if satisfaction is desired. We've studied them both, from all angles, and adapted to all sorts of roofs. Before YOU decide, let's talk your roof over particularly. Maybe we can save you some money as well as trouble.

A Good Silo on Your Farm is Better Than a Gold Mine
 Inasmuch as it accomplishes a definite purpose and brings larger returns in beef, milk, butter fat and eggs.

The Indestructible Silo Block for 4-inch and 6-inch walls, one air space; for 8-inch walls, two air spaces. The Hollow Clay Block has been demonstrated to be the best material for Silo Construction.
 Let us show you samples of our "INDESTRUCTIBLE SILO BLOCKS."
 Get our free book on Silo construction. With the use of this book any ordinary mason can construct your silo without any difficulty.
 The cost of the material for a 14 ft. x 28 ft. complete silo, including roof and foundation, is very reasonable.

NEW GAS LIGHT CO.The Home Beautiful

An extremely simple exterior appeals to the good taste of the average home builder when simplicity does not carry with it a suggestion of cheapness. The plan here shown has this advantage and combines with it the appearance of roominess, which it really possesses. A large living room, dining room, veranda and kitchen, makes the first floor a delight to the housekeeper and the four large chambers on the second floor possess a privacy which could not be secured by any other arrangement. The sleeping porch on the second floor is also a feature becoming more and more popular and the modern home builder should if possible incorporate this in his building plans.

Two story brick house, size 28x32 feet. A large brick veranda in front, brick foundation and slate roof. First story 9 feet 6 inches, second story 9 feet, finished attic, the attic being large, dormer windows gives it plenty of light. Note how compact and handy the arrangement is. Second floor has four chambers and closet to each, also fine bath room. Principal rooms in hard-wood balance yellow pine.

As here shown cost to build, $3,000 to $3,500.

HEART AND HOME TALKS

BY BARBARA BOYD

An Actress' Recipe for Success

ACCORDING to one of our popular actresses, success in life is a simple matter. Her three rules for achieving it are, "Be Sensible, Be Simple, Be Sincere." It would seem therefore, that success might be said to be a matter of the three S's—sense, sanity and simplicity.

But it is rather difficult to agree or disagree with her until some understanding is come to as to the definition of success. With one, it is the accomplishment of some special work. With another, it is the acquiring of wealth. With a third, it is achieving some high social position. So that it would seem as if there are as many meanings for success, as there are people chasing it.

But if we could stand off and get an impersonal view of it, might we not say that a successful life is, in a general way, one free from trouble and worry, and one that contributes something to other people's happiness? If we can accept such a definition, or concede at any rate, that three things are part of a successful life, then the rules given by the actress for success do have weight.

Does not much of our trouble and worry come from a lack of sanity and simplicity and sense in living?

If we would live sanely and simply and sensibly, we would have the time and the energy and the thought to put upon the pursuit that is to bring us success. And hence we would be more likely to achieve it. But we do not live sanely or simply or sensibly. We live complexly. We rush hither and yon frantically, to no purpose, and we see our ambition slipping farther and farther away in the distance. We fritter our energy out in a hundred and one foolish ways, and we have none left to overtake and capture that desire that gradually grows fainter and fainter as we gaze upon it.

And if we live sanely and simply and sensibly, we have the time and can give the thought to making others happy. But when we are caught in the whirl of the life of today, we can scarcely attend to our own pressing affairs, let alone give any heed to others. And so we fail to do the kind things that bring brightness and cheer and joy into others' lives, and by reflection into our own.

If, therefore, we haven't achieved by our present method that success we long for, why not try the experiment of following the plan suggested, and see if by this method we can come any nearer to the goal? Suppose we slacken our pace a little, try to live a little more simply, sanely, and sensibly, and see if the object of our desire does not draw a bit nearer. If we are anxious to amass a fortune, surely such living will help. If we want to achieve fame in some art or profession, this sort of living will give us the clearer vision. The only field in which it might not help, would be the social climb. And yet it is problematical, if even here, a stand for sanity and simplicity would not be such a surprise, that it would attract to the one who did it, that very attention she was desirous of winning.

As a trouble and worry eliminator, these rules are winners. And if we can escape trouble and worry in life, we are doing much. So it might well worth while to try the experiment of sane, sensible and simple living for awhile and see how it works out. We may be surprised to see what a short cut it is to the goal we are seeking.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

"THE BENEFIT we receive must be rendered again, line for line, cent for cent, deed for deed, to somebody."—Emerson.

"Why did you insist on paying Lucille for doing those dinner cards?" one woman questioned another. "It is good practice for her, and I'm sure she would be glad to do them for nothing."

"My dear," said the other woman, "if I pay Lucille ten cents apiece for those dinner cards, I'll be square with her, and I'll know just what they cost me. If I let her do them for nothing, I'll be under obligation to her and I shall not know how much they cost until I pay back."

That obligation, let me tell you about the last time I allowed myself to be put under obligation. Last winter Mrs. Rand took care of the babies for me several times. She offered to do it, and said she loved to, but, of course, I felt under obligation to her. Well, in the spring, she told me that her niece was coming to visit her, and that she was very anxious for her to have a good time, and I could see how I'd entered for her, so, of course, I felt in honor bound to do it. Ordinarily, I would have really liked to, but the children had just had the measles, and I had been up nights with them until I could hardly see for sleeplessness, and the house was disgustingly dirty; and I was just breaking in a new maid; and Fred was having a fearful attack of hay fever; so, altogether, the party I gave for her was the worst nightmare I ever had asleep or awake. I made up my mind then and there that I'd never put myself under obligation to anyone again.

Does this point of view strike you as ungracious?

The lady certainly did make some rather sweeping statements, but I think there is a good deal in her point of view, nevertheless.

Some of us have the habit of accepting favors with a serene sense of having gotten something for nothing. But one never gets something for nothing, even from one's friends. If you have done some favor for your friend, don't you feel at liberty to call upon him when you are in need of his particular kind of talent or ability, or anything else which he has? Well, then, don't forget that he will feel the same towards you in reversed circumstances. I do not think it is necessary to go so far as to refuse to ever put one's self under obligation. That would be to nullify the interchange of talents and opportunities, which is one of the legitimate uses of friendship. But don't think you are getting something for nothing when you allow yourself to be put under obligation. Remember that you are really giving your note of hand to pay on demand to bearer an unknown sum in unknown currency, and be sure you are willing to honor that note before you give it.

HAVE YOU THE RIGHT TO BE MARRIED?

ST. DOROTHY, CATH.

Dean Sumner, Chicago: "Henceforth no marriage ceremony will be performed in this church unless a certificate of good health is brought with the license."

Civilizing. Yet—although good health is an enlightened requirement for marriage—doesn't it pale to insignificance as a reason for staying married?

Before finishing your examination of yourself to find out if you have a right to marry, ask: "How do I stand on the reason for staying married?" You will hear that the married must stay together no matter what comes. Three reasons are usually given, the solidarity of society, the sanctity of the bond, and more than all, the children.

Search yourself carefully. Ask yourself honestly, Put aside pride and fear of censure. Then, after all, isn't the only reason for staying together—the same as the reason for coming together—a love so strong that you can't get along without each other?

Take the reason most often put forward for the solidarity of society. It is agreed on all sides that society grows and develops in fineness, purpose, and strength because of the home, exactly. But isn't it that home, just as it is that state, which stands against all assaults where its people love alike, think alike and work together? Has any other kind of home or state lived to be of value or influence?

As to the sanctity of the bond, what sanctifies it but love? Without love is there anything but legalized cohabitation?

But when it comes to the children there is usually a halt. Suppose the wife feels that the selfishness of a husband is no longer bearable. Suppose the husband has decided his life is worthless with his present mate. What do both usually do? Don't they struggle and quarrel and become unnatural and embittered because they go on for "the sake of the children?"

The sake of the children! As if a home like that could be for the sake of the children.

The pitiful story of a twelve-year-old girl who killed herself a few weeks ago because she couldn't choose between a separating father and mother has become a big talking point for the "sake of the children" arguers. Perhaps it is the only case of her kind on record, at least a rare one. But if you want to know something of the miserable fate of children who wouldn't have been born if their parents hadn't stayed together too long, go visit the Humane Society offices in any city.

Heart and Home Problems

by MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

The time to think of that "dear little one" is about an hour before taking the first highball when there's time to catch a car home and have a romp with the little scamp before bedtime or before the mother does some silly, peace-destroying thing. And the best time for both to think is before the "I wills" are said.

The Kitchen Cabinet

A GOOD cook can vary the flavors of food as a composer varies his orchestral colors and harmonies, getting genuine artistic as well as gastronomic pleasure therefrom.—Henry T. Finch.

SPRING SALADS.

The early dandelions are most acceptable salad plants and when grown under cover so that they are crisp and white, there is nothing in greens that is equal to them. Serve cut up with a little chopped onion or chives with French dressing poured over them.

Spinach is another good green to be served as a vegetable or with hard-boiled eggs and a boiled dressing as a salad.

The fresh green onions cut up over lettuce and served with French dressing is very wholesome salad.

Lettuce, peanuts and chopped onion with French dressing is another good combination.

Cheese and celery salad is a most delightful combination. Stuff the stalks of celery with cream cheese, well seasoned and tinted green, if desired.

Brazilian Salad.—Here is a dainty tid bit to set before guests. Take equal parts of sliced strawberries and pineapple and a dozen or more Brazil nuts cut in thin slices after removing the brown skin. Let stand to marinate in a little lemon juice, then serve on head lettuce with mayonnaise dressing.

A change from the French dressing is to add to it a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and a tablespoonful of catsup. Serve this on head lettuce with chives. It is good on cucumbers or tomatoes, either or both.

Water cress is one of our early spring greens and should be more often eaten, as it is valuable as a tonic.

A very attractive salad in appearance is water cress, radishes and celery. The radishes and celery are chopped and sprinkled over the cress, served with French dressing and garnished with thin slices of radishes overlapping each other.

Radishes and green peppers served on lettuce with mayonnaise is another salad worthy of a place.

A beautiful salad may be prepared by rolling balls of cream cheese in chopped pistachio nuts. Serve on lettuce with any dressing liked.

Nellie Maxwell.

UP-TO-DATE HOUSEKEEPING

General Houseworkers—Loaf and Cup Cakes and Other Recipes.

By Alice E. Whitaker.

The woman who is at the head of an institution, or a boarding house sometimes says to the mistress of a small household, "See how smoothly I run things with but a dozen domestic help." How is it with you, with but one housekeeper?

The fact is that the larger household offers more opportunity for system in arranging the work and more chance for the workers to have companionship. Any woman will prefer to work in the place where her exact duties are defined and she is not liable to be called on for extra service.

The best that can be done in the small household is to plan carefully and if possible refrain from changing the outline of the day's work after it is made and explained.

Even with the best planning there is small chance of specializing to any degree where one domestic, with some assistance from her employer, must do it all. In reality there are few general houseworkers to be hired today but there are cooks, cleaners and laundresses, each with the limits to her work drawn sharply.

Little cup cakes, bread pudding or garnished fancifully are always favorites. Use little patty pans or muffin tins or the old time fluted tin. Make them by the following rule: Cream one-half cup of butter, add one half cup of sugar and beat again, add the well beaten yolks of four eggs. Have three cups of flour sifted with four level teaspoons of baking powder and add to the first mixture alternately with one cup of milk. Beat constantly, add the juice and grated yellow rind of one lemon and when the batter is smooth fold in carefully the whites of four eggs beaten stiff and dry.

Watch while baking for if the oven is too hot the batter will boil up in the center and the cake will be uneven on the top and cannot be level.

As a little variation on liver and bacon try cooking the liver in the oven with thin slices of salt pork. After the liver is sliced wash it well and cut each slice by a very thin slice of salt pork. Broil with flour, pour enough water over to keep for himself. If one does not feel grief, or if he can throw it off by going to places of amusement, there is still a certain to be shown the one who has died and it is well to avoid criticism. However, if you grieve you must not allow yourself to become morbid. Find all the enjoyment you can so far as you do not allow disrespect to your husband's memory.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will you please tell me how to remove ink stains from a pink and white dress? YOUNG SCHOOL GIRL.

Use an ink eraser which your druggist can supply to you. However, if your dress is a very good one I would advise you to take it to a dry cleaner as any eraser will leave a slight yellow stain, which would hardly be noticeable if a small spot of ink were removed; but could ruin the dress if the stain were large enough.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am eighteen years of age and have always lived on a farm. My shoulders are very round as a result of doing hard work when I was a child. I was always so tired that I didn't have ambition to walk straight; do you think a shoulder brace would help me?

Will-power to keep straight would probably help you more, although if your shoulders are much deformed I would advise you to take treatment. Probably osteopathy would accomplish the best results.

Dinner Stories

"Any nurse who yearns for higher wages should study stenography," said a trained nurse. "Five out of the eleven patients I had last year demanded shorthand as one of the nurse's qualifications. Four of them were men, but the one woman put together. Invariably the nurse who adds stenography to her other accomplishments can command higher wages. Business men consider it worth an extra five dollars a week from burning. Set in the oven and bake twenty minutes or more. A good gravy will be made by the flour and water and the fat cooked out of the pork.

For a good boiled salad dressing beat together two eggs, a level tablespoon of sugar, one-half teaspoon of salt, one level tablespoon of mustard, two level tablespoons of cornstarch and one level tablespoon of butter. When smooth add one-half cup of milk and when well blended set the dish in another of boiling water and add one-half cup of vinegar slowly beating all the time. Cook ten minutes.

The following cake recipe is vouched for by a fine cake maker, and it divided it with full rule and method are given. Cream one cup of butter, add two and one-half cups of sugar, and beat them the yolks of six eggs that have been beaten until light colored. Sift four cups of pastry flour, measured after sifting, with four level teaspoons of cream of tartar three times. Add one level teaspoon of soda to one cup of milk and stir into the flour. When smooth add one cup of seeded raisins slightly floured and last fold in the stiffly beaten whites of six eggs. Bake in a large pan and when cold cover with a thick white icing.

"Well, senior, such societies would be useless in my country," he said.

"The man who would lift his finger against a little child has not been born in Spain."

"The late Gen. James H. Weaver," said a Dow Moore Populist, "had a just faith in the American farmer. He believed that from the farmer the republic's regeneration would come."

"He once condemned, in a lecture, the caricaturist's former, a type purely imaginary, that he hit off vividly with an anecdote."

"A farmer of this type, he said was seated on a barrel whittling a stick when a traveler stopped and said:

"Well, sir, what do you think of Christian Science?"

"Ain't heard nothin on it," the farmer answered.

"Never heard of Christian Science Well, well!" said the traveler; and he resumed:

"With which side do your sympathies lie in the Turkish-Italian war?"

"Didn't know that wuz no war," muttered the farmer, and he bit off a chew from a big black plug.

"The traveler then tried him on another tack."

"Do you consider the Wright biplane inferior to the foreign monoplane for swift, safe flying?"

"Star's I know," said the farmer, "the world haint seen no flyin' yet."

"Why man," exclaimed the traveler, quite staggered, "don't you ever read the newspapers?"

"I neter," said the farmer without lifting his eyes from his whittling. "I neter, but ten or eleven years ago I stopped it. They got too flyin' close for me. Since then I bin readin' a book."

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

Fools the Calendar

Don't look older than you are. It is just as easy to look younger. While lack of hair or poor hair is not always an indication of age, it is frequently accepted as such.

A person well advanced in years possessing a good head of hair is always spoken of as "well preserved."

Everyone can retain beautiful, luxuriant hair if they make the effort. In almost every instance poor hair or the loss of hair may be traced to the activity of the dandruff germ. Newbro's Herpicide kills this germ and puts the scalp in a perfectly healthy condition. With the destruction of the dandruff germ the hair no longer drops out, the itching of the scalp stops almost at once.

Newbro's Herpicide is the original remedy for which there are many substitutes, preparations claimed to be "just as good." You don't have to accept a substitute. Insist upon having genuine Herpicide.

For sale by all druggists. Applications obtained at good barber shops. One dollar size bottles are always guaranteed. Send 10c in postage to The Herpicide Co., Dept. 11, Detroit, Mich., for sample and book. J. P. Baker, special agent.

Any Cake Made With MATCHLESS FLOUR will be successful Madam

If you use Christian's Matchless Flour you can bake your cake and eat it too.

So-called "pastry" flours are made exclusively from winter wheat which when sound imparts a nutty flavor to a baking.

Matchless Flour contains just enough No. 1 Red Winter Wheat to give your cake the desired flavor and smoothness; just enough No. 1 Minnesota Spring Wheat to make the cake light.

Follow your recipe and use Matchless Flour and you will soon have a reputation as a cake baker.

HANDS WOULD CRACK OPEN AND BLEED

Blisters Formed, Skin Scaled Off, and Flesh Burned and Itched Dreadfully. Healed by Less Than One Cake of Cuticura Soap and One Box of Cuticura Ointment.

"About two months ago my hands started to crack open and bleed, the skin would scale off, and the good flesh would burn and itched dreadfully. When my hands were so sore, there were small blisters like water blisters which formed. They itched dreadfully, it just seemed as though I could tear the skin all off. I would scratch them and the skin would peel off, and the flesh would be all red and crack open and bleed. It worried me very much, as I had never had anything like this before. I was so afraid I would have to give up my employment."

"I consulted my doctor, and he said he didn't think it would amount to anything, but it kept getting worse. One day I saw a piece in one of the papers about a lady who had the same trouble with her hands. She had used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and was cured. I decided to try them, and my hands were all healed before I had used one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment. I am truly thankful for the good results from the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. For thanks to the lady who wrote the article for me to lose a day from work. I have had no return of the skin trouble." (Signed) Mrs. Mary E. Breck, 2322 Brown Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Jan. 12, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are for sale everywhere, but those who wish to try them without charge may do so by sending to: Patten Drug Chem. Corp., Dept. 6A, Boston, for a liberal sample of each, post-free, together with 32-p. book on the skin and scalp.

The Story of The Burning of The Monongahela at Guantanamo Bay

(By Leslie E. Bookout.)

Early in 1908 a close observer of the New York papers might have seen about a four line notice to the effect that the U. S. S. Monongahela, Station Ship at the naval station Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, had burned. Except for this passing notice few of the outside world knew of the passing of this remarkable ship.

Why no other notice was taken of the burning of a U. S. Naval vessel with a total loss of guns and equipment, or why the proceedings of the board of investigation, if there was one, were never published, it is not the purpose of this article to explain. Perhaps, the ship being an old and obsolete craft and her equipment of little use except for training, it was not deemed necessary or advisable to go to the trouble of an investigation; or an investigation which might have been too embarrassing to certain individuals—who can tell.

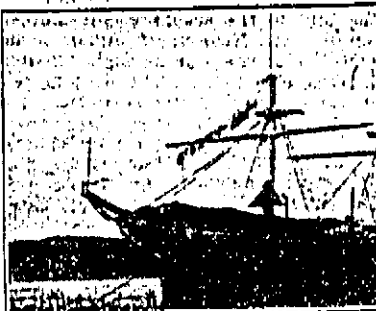

Yet the fact remains that little notice was taken of this incident beyond the confines of the naval station.

While I was a member of the ship's crew, I had been detailed for shore duty with the marine detachment and was on the opposite side of the bay when the fire started. It was well on to ten o'clock p. m. we observed the distress signals from the tug Unions which was at anchor a short distance away. The marine guard was hastily called out, steam launches fired up and taking two large cutters in tow, the entire marine detachment hastened to the scene.

The fire started shortly after nine o'clock when all hands had turned in for the night. It started in the neighborhood of a bunch of signal rockets just below the bridge. The explosion of these rockets created a good deal of confusion and prevented instant action on the part of the crew. The flames spread rapidly and the next day despite the disastrous night. Being almost without clothing they were forced to do anything they could get their hands on.

The hardest thing in the way of wearing apparel was a lot of clothing belonging to a minstrel troupe, which had been stored ashore. These were quickly put to use and the crew looked more like circus clowns than sailors who had lost their ship. If you ask a sailor how he likes a certain ship, he usually replies that she is a "fine home" or a "home" as the case may be. This statement is reinforced and emphasized by a list of qualifying adjectives or endearing terms best understood by sea-farers.

Monongahela at Anchor Before the Fire.

men. The Monongahela was a "home."

Not only did the crew, both of officers and men, lose a "home," but they lost clothing, guns, books, jewelry, money and in fact, everything they possessed. It may surprise some, but it is a fact that sailors have a weakness for jewelry, especially diamonds. I recall one individual who lost a diamond ring valued at $400.00. Every one is familiar with the sight of a burning building. While it is an interesting and of one of the heaviest shore batteries. Her bridge was shot away and her commander, Captain McKinstry, disabled. In this action she suffered a loss of six killed and twenty-one wounded. She was in the thickest of the battle of Manila Bay in 1898 and was one of those ships that fought so valiantly and finally disabled the armored ram Tennessee. She was in the front line of battle when Farragut gave his famous order, "Dam the torpedoes, go ahead." In this battle she sustained severe damage and heavy loss of men.

Perhaps, one of the most remarkable things that ever occurred to any ship happened to the Monongahela on November 18, 1897. While anchored off Fredericksstadt on the Isle of St. Croix, Danish West Indies, she was lifted by a gigantic wave, caused by an earthquake, and was carried over the tops of a number of warehouses and landed in one of the streets of the city. A receding wave carried her out of the town and placed her on a coral reef, without serious damage, and with only five of her crew lost.

After the Civil War she made an extensive cruise in Pacific and Atlantic waters and finally, when the iron clads replaced the wooden ships, she became a training ship for apprentices. After the apprentice system was done away with she became station ship at Guantanamo Bay Naval Station where she remained until her final destruction.

more or less awe inspiring spectacle, we realize that it is a thing that has happened. It does not move, it does not live. Once built it stands like a rock until the elements of time destroy it. With a ship it is different.

It moves in stately majesty before the wind or vibrates with the life of its engines below. It moves to starboard or port in response to the hand at the wheel. It seems more like a living being than anything created by the hand of man. A short distance from the shore by the smoking ruins of one of the most remarkable ships that ever sailed under the United States flag. She was built and launched about the year of 1867, had a displacement of 2,100 tons, and in her fighting days, carried a battery of six eight-inch guns and one six pounder.

She was with Farragut's fleet in the opening of the Mississippi river in 1862, and while passing Fort Hudson she ran aground and for a half an hour was directly under the guns closest, the shrapnel being trimmed and the outfit yard has been ordered cleaned up. Mr. Franklin's efforts are making a notable improvement.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES.

OLD AGE.

By Howard L. Hann.

Old age is that period of man's existence when his enthusiasm and teeth begin to slip away from him. It is becoming quite an easy matter to pick up bargains in teeth, but at three score and ten a man's enthusiasm for joy rides and the light fantastic fades out faster than the colors in a sunset gladium. Old age is largely a state of mind. Its outward symbols are wrinkles, and a mild preference for corn meal mush together with a tendency to arise early in the morning and shuffle down the furnace just when the rest of the family are trying to collect in a little lost sleep. There are two kinds of old age—sweet and sour. The former is the more popular of the two, and is generally surrounded by love and a collection of bed slippers. A sour old age gives a great deal of pain to all concerned, especially at the time of probating the will. Some people are naturally contrary and arrive at old age several years ahead of their schedule and deny the home with warlike conduct. Some relative to the quality of the old crust, while others trip into the old man's like an animated sunbeam, scattering unselfish germs and sweet threads among the gold along life's pathway. The old age which retains the interest in youth and flowers and looks and politics is the most beautiful thing in this world, but none, unless it is the brightness of youth as yet unspoiled. The man of fifty who turns into Old Age alley, accompanied by crow's feet and the sound of a slipping clutch, had better strap repairs on his digestion or his bank account. Worry hurries more men into old age than length of years. There are a whole lot of people who are laying in supplies for a rainy day for relatives who proceed to blow in what is left of the bright green limousines with cigar holder and reading lamp.

Certain Kinds of Bonds Are the Only Securities Accepted By the U. S. Government For the Funds of Its Postal Savings Banks

YOU want to loan $500 or more, at 5% or 5½% interest—then be as careful as the Government is in what security you loan money on—and accept only the security that the government accepts.

We will sell you one $500 bond, or one $1000 bond—or any amount you wish of these securities.

These bonds are pledges of the public and private property, the integrity, and the taxes of a city or town—is that sufficient security for your money?

The interest and principal are both paid by a Tax levied against all real estate and all personal property in the city.

These Municipal Bonds Pay 5 and 5½ per cent (Interest Paid Every Six Months)

And they can be sold at a moment's notice, for they meet the requirements of the U. S. Government as security for the deposits of its Postal Savings Banks, and that makes them as transferable as gold dollars.

You want further details about these bonds—and you shall have them at once.

To those who have given little attention to "what is a bond" or to "why the Government so strictly confines itself to certain kinds of bonds as securities for its Postal Banks," we offer our Gift Booklet.

This book is not written in technical bond language—it is just plain newspaper English, written for everybody, from the College Professor to the Schoolboy.

We especially recommend these bonds to those men and women who wish absolute security, good interest, and freedom from investments that demand time and attention.

Holland Furnaces Make Warm Friends

Burn Any Kind of Fuel—Reduces Coal Bills More Than Half

You can burn high priced anthracite if you wish to—but any kind of fuel, soft coal, slack, screenings, coke or wood—yields an immense, even, clean heat and helps you save fully one-half on your fuel bills if you buy a Holland.

The Holland Furnace is unlike any other. Many special features make it the simplest and easiest to run and the Holland service, from factory to you, gives the utmost satisfaction to every Holland owner.

With the Holland Air-Admitting Firepot, the ash is always dropped away and the fire is kept to the coals. There is no smoke, heat, or heat, the coals burn equally around the entire circumference. This makes the Holland Furnace, without exception, the most enduring, as well as the most economical, furnace made. Write us or call on our local Branch Manager for How Build Today To Replace the Worn-out Parts of Yesterday?

Each day thinkers use up cells of the Brain.

Each day active workers destroy cells in the nerve centers.

If the food lacks the things Nature demands for rebuilding, Nervous Prostration and Brain-fag result.

Suppose a bricklayer tried to build a wall and the boss furnished brick sand and water, but left out the lime?

Suppose you eat plenty of albumin and take sufficient water, but neglect food which contains Phosphate of Potash?

Nature cannot rebuild gray matter in nerve centers and brain without Phosphate of Potash which binds together albumin and water to make it.

Phosphate of Potash, as grown in the grains by Nature, is more than half the mineral salts in Grape-Nuts.

AN ABORIGINAL WOMAN

By Martha McCulloch Williams

A GREEN world lay radiant beneath a stormy sunset, and new-fallen raindrops fell from the sky. The rainclouds swept by southerly, thus the lustrous winds brought fragrance and coolness to Millbank and Evelyn. He sat in the swing, now and again swaying himself lightly; he lay prone upon the warm, short turf, his head pillowed upon one of the great tree-roots, tripping up through it.

"He stretched his arm luxuriously across his head, looked at his palm as though it were a curiosity, and murmured: 'Why do I feel like Adam six thousand years after date?' 'You don't—it is only a pose,' Evelyn returned, her head lifting the least bit.

"Millbank laughed lastly, 'You know I never pose,' he said, trying hard to put reproach into the words, but failing.

Evelyn leaned a little toward him, her fingers set tip to tip, her small shoes tapping the earth impatiently. 'Then you are a wonderful beginner,' she said. 'Admit that you lagged in Adam by the ears as it were, so you could tell me you knew what it was to be driven out of Paradise. Don't deny it—the speech is as obvious as it would be insane.'

"Deny it! When did I ever contradict a lady?" Millbank returned, letting his gaze wander to the sky, where a crescent moon began to show white in the sea of blue. 'Notwithstanding, I have an impression that I meant to say—something else.'

"Then, why don't you say it?" Evelyn demanded, sitting straighter. Millbank shifted his eyes to the leafy intricacies overhead, answering slowly: 'I meant to explain—if I said anything further—that, like Adam, I had encountered the aboriginal woman. You know you are aboriginal!' He sat up and looked full in her eyes. 'Not unappreciated—indeed, you are almost too wise. Yet you are full of raw human impulses—no full as though you were nothing but a dress of leaves and a smile—'

"Indeed! How did you find it out?" Evelyn interrupted.

"Millbank rose to his feet. 'Sympathetically,' he said, bending low above her, so low that his lips almost touched her silky hair. 'I may as well tell you so. You have known it from the beginning—how mad I am to seize you, and carry you off—far away from men and Mrs. Grundy. You know, too, we should live happily ever after. If only I dared!'

In the last words his voice broke to a hoarse whisper. By the waning light, Evelyn saw his face white. She slid from the swing, and stepped a pace from him, before she said with a little laugh: 'Don't be tragic! I hate to see a good fellow soiled. And you've soiled yourself mostly the best of good fellows; therefore, a delightful surprise. You know, of course, your reputation as a professional lady-killer. You haven't lived up to it in the least. Instead, until now, you've quite lived it down.'

Her voice was tranquil, but her knees shook under her; she sighed with shame, she ached also with joy. 'I would but carry her off! Or,

If they could die as they stood—together. Every fiber of her thrilled toward him; he must see it but for the friendly thickening dusk. He took her hands without a word, and made to lead her toward the gate, but stopped a little way off, saying:

"Wait! I had better fetch you a jacket and a hat. You'll be cold in that thin white frock. We shall be traveling until morning."

"Let me go!" Evelyn said quickly. Millbank shook his head. "You will not come back," he said. "I shall let you escape me. Walk slowly toward the station. I shall overtake you in full time. The train comes a little after moonset. They will think at the house we are going for a stroll."

"I think we are—to the end of the lane. No farther," Evelyn answered. "So come along! I am not afraid of dew."

"What are you afraid of?" Millbank asked very low.

Evelyn shrank faintly. "Of you—and mostly of myself," she said. "Listen, I—"

"I refuse. Silence is the only proper answer to honesty," Millbank interrupted, hurrying her forward. They were almost at the gate. The turn of the path brought the house full in view. So they saw the knot on the steps suddenly dissolve to let through a leaping figure that came toward them, shouting breathlessly:

"Millbank! Millbank! Keep on! Run! You must make the next train. Doctor's telephone! Is your only chance to see your boy alive?"

"Shall I go? The child is—with its mother," Millbank asked in a shaken whisper. Evelyn pushed him forward, almost roughly. "Unless you go I shall hate you!" she cried very low.

The runner had almost come up with them. The train was whistling for the station next beyond their own. Millbank rushed through the gate and sped on down the lane. Evelyn's heart went with him, but her soul rose up in thankfulness toward the runner. Evelyn, young Peyton, transiently nicknamed "Daddy Longlegs" by the rest. He came awkwardly beside her, saying in a gasp:

"If I were—shouldn't be—in time—" back in the eleven. Daddy was a football hero, which of course counts a lot. But next to Daddy the youngster loved the water."

"His mother? Does he love her?" Evelyn asked softly.

Peyton drew a long breath. "I don't know—honestly I don't," he said. "You see, he never talks about her. Lance taught him before he could talk plain that ladies must not be discussed in the presence of mere men. All I ever heard from him about her was: 'My mother is very beautiful, and has beautiful taste.' This was down at Linton, the Millbank place. Lance nearly always keeps him there. It's about all the time he spends in the old homestead. Mrs. Millbank—I beg her pardon, Mrs. Millbank-Ware—sends the boy something every week of his stay. She had sent him a comic clock—a clown-frog which struck the hours by dancing upon a lily-leaf—just before I came—"

"Evidently she loves him enough for both parents," Evelyn interrupted.

Peyton gave her a keen look, answering doggedly: "She has no need to. Lance Millbank is the finest, fondest father I ever knew. That's why I can't help hoping this will bring him and his wife together again—the thought, chance, of losing the boy must make them understand."

"Why?" Evelyn asked as Peyton fell silent. "He did not answer for a little while, only walked beside her, keeping his eyes on the sky. When at last he spoke his voice was tense."

"They must understand that after a child comes there is no doing away with marriage—whatever the law says, or even the gospel. I believe she has understood all about it; she keeps the men at more than arm's-length, in spite of being so high and gay and going about a lot."

"I wonder why they separated. Does anybody know?" Evelyn asked, mainly for the sake of saying something, but she must not let "Daddy Longlegs" suspect how acutely he was torturing her. He gave a quick side-glance before he answered.

"Funny, but I believe she left him because she loved him too much. It—rather bored him, you see. So when Craigheart, the catch of ten seasons, new-come into his fortune, grew quite mad about her, she led him on to show Lance what she could do. Lance was never jealous of Craigheart—he couldn't be. But the fact that she was another matter. He himself was losing money right soon, and then, of course there was no scandal. Everything was done decently. And everybody expected her to marry Craigheart the minute the money was made absolute. Instead, she'd have nothing to say to him. You can't make people believe it, though. They all said it served her quite right when he married somebody else."

"Naturally," Evelyn commented. "It's so comforting to believe the worst of everything. Thank you so much for telling me the story. I've wanted to hear it ever since I knew Mr. Millbank. But there are some few things one can't ask outright."

"Especially—of the man you've swept off his feet," Peyton said, his lazy, drawing tongue voice suddenly rough and edged. "I don't mean it for immaturity, Miss Evelyn," he hurried on. "But—I've seen further, deeper into things than you ever dreamed. That's why I told you. You see, Lance's lawyer is, or was, my guardian. I—I had to warn you, side entrance. I had rather get away from the rest a little while."

Mrs. Brent, mistress of Waysend, was Peyton's aunt, likewise, in a way, his fairy godmother. Her keen, kindly dark eyes saw far under the surface. Therefore, she was not ill pleased upon the third morning after Millbank's going to read about at breakfast his hurried arrival, which said:

"Little Lance has a chance of life, you will be glad to hear. We are taking him to the seashore—his mother and I. He feels so if either of us gets out of his waking sight, there's nothing else to do. The doctors tell us good salt air may save him, but that it is our only hope."

"How dramatic!" cried Miss Anstey, turning sharply upon Evelyn. "To think of a divorced couple brought together this way!"

"Rather say, how dreadful! You know each of them," began Mrs. Appold, the vivacious widow, who had been at sword's points with Miss Anstey over Millbank until such time as they had made common cause against Evelyn.

Peyton looked anxiously at Evelyn. He fancied she had not slept much; he knew she had eaten hardly enough for a bird these last days. It filled him with joy no less than pride to hear her interrupt Mrs. Appold with: "Why not say, 'How providential!' Suppose Mr. Millbank had married either of you. It would have been—well, rather awkward."

Cross-currents of desire, however deceitfully veiled, create dangerous social whirlpools. Evelyn felt herself caught in one. Would it drown her, or cast her up, bruised and broken, in some far haven? As the days went by she came to learn more and more upon George Peyton. He, knowing all, was still her knight; loyal as he was hopeless. The rest, who had only surmises colored by envy or malice, wounded and shamed by speeches and by silences, of which she could not in reason complain.

She did not wince for herself. Indeed, she did not wince palpably at all. But in the heavy watches of the night she stared, wide-eyed, at the walling stars, wondering, not the whether she could live a long life lonely —but what she should face her father when he came to know. He had strict ideas; divorce was to him a thing most abhorrent. No punishment was equal to his displeasure. He would be shocked—grieved beyond words, and never trust her again. She had been so proud of his trust, and of deserving it.

She did not want to deceive him, to hide her fault, but she did want to put it aside until she herself could tell him with a reasonable calm. He would hear of it, maybe even before he saw her. She knew gossip was busy with her name; the under-breath gossip that flies farther and faster than the smoking-room of his steamer homeward bound? She knew, vaguely, the smirch to a woman of placing her name handed in such a place. Hardly Keith would write at knowing the bare truth; how much more would he not suffer by hearing the story distorted and overgrown?

[Evelyn asked herself the question over and over until her head swam. It was the courage of desperate tenderness that found out an answer. One nail drives out another; so does one story, especially if it be more dramatic and more untruthful.

"Would you much mind being engaged to me, until after Christmas? And letting people guess it? Especially, Miss Anstey," she asked of Peyton at the end of a week.

"I might survive it," he said. "Indeed, I should have suggested something of the sort earlier, only I was afraid."

"I won't be—troublesome," Evelyn answered humbly. She had quite lost her fine elusive willfulness these last days.

Wayward lay inland more than a hundred miles. When August came in with deadly, smothering heat and parching drought, Mrs. Brent went to the shore, taking Evelyn and Peyton with her. She had her own bungalow, remote, retired, roomy; occupied only about once in five seasons, but kept trim for all that.

The shore-drive was true to name, and very beautiful—a long, undulating ribbon of smooth-beaten sand, strung beside the sea. One afternoon the fancy seized Evelyn to run the car over it in full sunshine.

"Keep on! And on! I want to fly," she said to Peyton after a long silence while they sped along.

He smiled at her, saying softly: "Where away?" Then, irrelevantly, "We're coming to the Millbank cottage. As I live, there's little Lance down there on the sand! Hullo! What's he doing? He's even up and waving to us! I wonder if he remembers me?"

Little Lance came three steps toward them. He was bare-headed, bare-armed, bare-legged, healthily tanned, but still thin.

"I suppose you two people are my mother's friends," he began politely. "She has run up to town for the day. Please to go home and not wake daddy. If you wake him, I can't finish burying him—and then he won't be all mine."

"Oh, I see!" Peyton said, shading his eyes with his hand, the better to stare at a long, muffled outline of something more than half sunk in the sand between them and the water.

"What put that in your mind, little man?" He nodded toward the long shape, and looked at the child. The lad gave him back a steady gaze.

"My mother. I've been very, oh, very sick. When I was so sick, she would hug me hard and say: 'You'll be all mine when I have buried you.' And I want daddy—not whistles—but all the time. I'm burying him, all over—then he can never go away."

"Does he know what you are doing?" Peyton asked.

"Partly," he said. "I asked him might I bury his feet. And he lay down in the grave I dug, and laughed and went to sleep. He's all covered up but his nose and his tippy-toes—he's very big, and my bucket is very small."

"I see," Peyton said again. He felt Evelyn trembling beside him. She got out of the car suddenly and started toward the child, who put out his hand to her, smiling up in her face.

Before either of them could speak there came a sound that made them turn—the clucking of a heavy rumbling. It was coming toward them, inclining Peyton's car. It was empty, except for the chauffeur, who sat hunched forward, scowling implacably and swearing drunken oaths. Peyton had halted his car where the drive curved half-moon wise around a little landlock inlet. The drunken chauffeur, instead of following the road-way, sent his car upon the beach sand across the chord of the arc, straight for the recumbent figure, nearly hidden in the sand.

Peyton shouted at him. He paid no heed. There was nothing for it but to force him. Peyton wrenched his wheel for over, held it hard until he was within two yards of the other car, then flung himself out upon the kindly yielding sand.

He heard as he fell the crash and grating of a shattering impact, the wild crying of the drunken fellow, a child's shrill cry. Then he knew no more until he found himself looking up, faint and breathless, into Evelyn's face. Beside him she knelt, white as the silver moon, but with a new light in her eyes. Millbank, a little way off, smiled softly to see it, and hugged his son, who clung to his neck, trying hard not to cry.

"Georgy! Dear lad! That was the pluckiest thing! How can I ever thank you!" Millbank said, kneeling upon Peyton's other side, and wringing his hand.

Peyton drew a long, long breath, sat up weakly, and put a hand to his head, but said in gasps, his eyes on Evelyn: "Don't thank me. It was for her sake. I couldn't let you be crushed before her eyes."

"You would have done it, anyway!" Evelyn cried—Evelyn no longer white, but red as any rose. "And I am glad you would," she hurried on, "because I want the man I love to show what he is—the bravest man in the world."

"He is. The very bravest. And I wish you joy—the joy you both deserve," Millbank said huskily. "I'm going to devote the life you risked your neck, and broke your arm to save, to trying to deserve my boy—and his mother."—Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Company.

MAKING PROGRESS IN MADISON PARK WORK; GOSSIP OF THE STATE

Assembly Grounds Were Acquired and Much New Work Done in Other Parks During Last Year.

Significant progress was made by the city of Madison in the provision and improvement of parks during the last year. The Assembly grounds, a choice tract of land on Lake Monona, and easily accessible from the city, was purchased for $10,000, and bonds to secure the price issued. It was almost certain that if the land was not immediately acquired by the city it would be divided into small holdings and the opportunity of the city to secure it be lost.

The planting and grading of the addition to Tenney park was entirely completed during the last season so far as the ground work of the park is concerned. The cost of the new work done during the past year was $1,002.74. This makes the total cost of the park up to date $79,650. Of this sum the city contributed $32,250.50 for the purchase of land and $388.50 for construction. Mr. Tenney's contribution was $12,500. The remainder of the cost was contributed by regular income of the association.

The amount expended in new work in Henry Vilas park during the past year was $1,297.27. This makes the total cost of the park to date $68,754.66. Of this sum the city contributed $3,900, including the cost of macadamizing Burr Oak drive and Senator and Mrs. Vilas $25,000. This however, does not include the $25,000 contributed by Mrs. Vilas for the purchase of additional land as an addition to the park.

The boulevard to South Madison is practically completed. A small portion of the road and sidewalk remains to be built but the work is under way and will soon be finished. The grading and the planting which was to be done by the association and which was necessarily deferred until the completion of the road is now in progress and will be finished early this season.

"The appropriation of one-half mill upon the assessed value of the taxable property in the city of Madison which was originated in 1908, has been continued and this year the amount realized will be $14,001.75. With strict economy this sum will enable the association to maintain the parks but it will not permit certain improvements which should be made at once."

MORE SALOON LICENSES THAN THE LAW ALLOWS

City of Menominee, Michigan, Grants Forty-two When City is Entitled to But Twenty-seven. Totally disregarding the state law governing the number of saloon licenses to be granted by each city and declining the request given them by some of the city's most brilliant attorneys, the Menominee city council recently voted to allow the applications for licenses entered by forty-two saloonkeepers. This is but two less than the number granted last year. The action of the council was a surprise to every man present and to the councilmen themselves. Whether any of the men given licenses known to be in excess of the law will decline to hazard the $5000 demanded of them, for fear of interference by state authorities is not known, but it is thought that three or four will fail to qualify. City Attorney Cuddy said that he had spent a great amount of time in the consideration of the question and that after giving the city the benefit of every possible doubt he could not construe the law to allow more than twenty-seven saloons. He based his opinion on decisions of the supreme court and attorney general.

The DIAMOND CIPHER

A Baseball Romance

By W. A. PHILON

"That seems to have worked pretty well," grimly commented Solano. "That particular pack of dogs won't be in shape to trail anybody for a week to come. If they want to follow us with hounds, they'll have to send back for another batch, and by the time they arrive we can be some distance on our way. If they try to track us without dogs, we have a splendid chance to get through these woods to some spot where we can board a train. The chances are all with us right now—your noble baron is fooled again."

Poole more completely than the boys imagined. At the very moment when Brockett and Solano lay panting in their weedy hair, a large, double-breasted, irascible man walked up to Baron Zollern, who was just alighting from a train and was gazing blindly upon the unaccustomed scenes of Little Rock.

"Baron Zollern?" demanded the double-breasted and irascible individual. "It is me. Yet wish you?" acknowledged the baron, amiably.

The large, irascible man seized Baron Zollern with a clutch like that of a laundry pressor. "I want you, first," he thundered, "and then I want that gang that you hired to bluff the conductor of the Chicago train. I'll put you where the flea won't bite you and then I'll collect your partners!"

And the genuine sheriff of Little Rock, without further delay or parley, dragged the noble Baron Zollern headlong from the station platform.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Even in the Arkansas hills news travels swiftly, and the boys had hardly begun the second installment of their flight when they were halted by a grinning and wholly peaceful negro, bringing tidings from Little Rock, with a request that they return forthwith and give whatever evidence they could against the German noble. "Ah, jes' 'bout rode a hawes to death, gentlemen," protested the black man, "an' when Ah couldn't ride him no longer in dis canebrake Ah done liked suthin' 'pow'ful to catch 'em. De sheriff, he 'lowed dat he'd give me $5 if Ah brought 'em in, an' dat he'd 'jest ezchully kick de debblin' outen me if Ah didn't—an' so Ah stired makeef Ah didn't."

Three hours later the youngsters, staided, muddy and thoroughly tired, were having a friendly pow-wow with the sheriff, while a furious German, who had been forcibly relieved of sundry interesting papers, was foaming in a strong though crudely constructed cell.

"Right smart sort of crook, this Dutchman," said the sheriff, half-admiringly. "Found out, somehow, which road you boys would take. Knew mighty well dat if he sent any fake wires to me I'd do a little investigating before I acted any, an' so he makes up his own law forces, Gey-

Tom Tarbrow, a fellow we ran out of here two years ago—must have been living in Chicago ever since—to play my part. Sends deputy sheriffs down to help bluff the conductor and our youngsters. Good scheme, all right. Would have worked if you hadn't been handy with your fists and lively on your legs. What gets me, though, is his nerve in hiring Pod Morgan's pack of hounds to trail you. Pod's all heated up. Says he don't blame you boys none for peppering your tracks, but he'll get satisfaction out of the German or out of Tom Tarbrow. Says his dawgs won't be no good again for six months, maybe never."

"How would they have handled us?" questioned Solano. "They couldn't very well put us in any lockup with no authority except their nerve."

"Wouldn't have needed to," laughed the sheriff. "Their scheme was plain enough. All they wanted was the papers and letters you boys are carrying. They'd have took those away from you and then turned you loose, figuring that you were too completely bluffed to make any kick, or to do anything excepting to go straight home. Good ideas, sons—but you sure did sting 'em this time."

"What will you do with Baron Zollern and his hired men?" asked Brockett with natural curiosity. The sheriff knitted his brows, thoughtfully.

"That's something of a power," admitted the official. "If you lads would stay over and testify we could give them plenty of chances to work out a nice long sentence—specially Tom Tarbrow. Impersonating an officer isn't a healthy trick 'round these parts, and we'd fix Tom proper. You say, though, that you have to be on your way right sudden, and I won't detain you. Reckon I can send Tom and his fellows up for a little while without your help—the testimony of the conductor and of Pod Morgan will just about settle them. I'll be cursed if I know what to do with the Dutchman, though."

"The baron? He's a spy of the German government, and one of the Kaiser's most valuable agents," Solano remarked.

"That's a certain clench," said the sheriff, "but that won't get us much right now. We know who he is; we've got some goods on him, and we've taken a lot of choice credentials away from him. Wish it was wartime—we'd soon settle a polecat like him. In the wartime we used to catch Yankee spies 'round these woods now and then—and there was no formality at all. Not a bit of formality. Just a tree-limb and a halter. If we only had a nice excuse, like those times, son, we'd tend to your German. As it is, I'm afraid we can't do much. Might print the story on him, but that would tip off any other spies or secret agents as to where you boys were traveling, and cause you more trouble 'till it would be worth."

"Why not have all his credentials photographed," suggested Brockett, "and keep one set of copies here, while sending another set to the secret service at Washington?"

"Good idea, boy. Good idea," chuckled the sheriff. "I'll do it. Do it right away."

And a few hours later, various highly valued documents, papers that would cause tremendous stirrings in the land of the Black Eagle, were en route to Washington. The sheriff, by way of good measure and variety, presented the boys with a set of the photographic duplicates, kept a set himself, and sent still another set to official friends in Chicago. As to the baron: He raved. He chafed heaven and the infernal regions alike to witness that dire calamities would descend upon the United States, the state of Arkansas, the city of Little Rock, and the hardy sheriff, unless his papers were returned and all duplicates destroyed. Whereupon the sheriff, apparently but little frightened, had the baron photographed while at the height of his oratory, and presented the boys with souvenir copies of the proofs.

Late in the evening, somewhat refreshed by the hospitality of the sheriff, the boys resumed their journey. The sheriff himself escorted them to the train, and with him came Pod Morgan, owner of the bloodhounds baited by the pepper trick a few short hours before. Mr. Morgan showed no resentment against the youngsters, and even insisted on sending a young hound to the home address of each one—"a dawg," as Mr. Morgan stated it, "that'll be a real comfort to yore family, an' will be mighty useful when it comes tuh keepin' foreign snakes from trappin' 'round 'er promises." Several of Mr. Morgan's famous bloodhounds were with him and the boys learned, with astonishment, that the dreaded man-tracker was rather small, mean-looking creatures, not large enough or powerful enough to make a good fight against a bull-terrier, and answering in no description the stories or the pictures which pass current in all literature.

"Real bloodhounds," explained Mr. Morgan, grinningly, "has come tuh be nothin' but show dawgs, with long ears that'd git caught in the brambles in a minute. Yuh turn a pack of real bloodhounds loose after a man, an' they'd all sit down on their tails an' yell right helpless. Real, genuine, man-catchin' dawgs is a wuss mixture than Injun an' nigger—but they can follow, an' they can find."

"They don't look," ventured Solano, "as if they would tear a man to pieces when they caught him."

Mr. Morgan and the sheriff haw-hawed long and loud.

"No, son, they don't look that way, and they ain't," gurgled the delighted Mr. Morgan. "What's more, there never was no man-eatin' dawgs used fer chase nobody, not even niggers. In the old slavery days, when a nigger run away, the thing to do was tuh catch him, but not tuh kill him. Kill a $1,000 nigger? Son, that would be plumb idiotic, wouldn't it? The hounds was simply used tuh follow him, locate him, an' make a racket 'till the hunters could come up an' get the man."

"In Cuba," put in Solano, "the Spaniards used real bloodhounds, and fierce ones too, to run down and kill the Indians."

"Well," assented Mr. Morgan, "that would be plumb different. An Injun is a different beast from a nigger. Your nigger was mighty valuable—you had to look out fer his hide. Your Injun was mighty dangerous, an' better dead than livin'. See the difference, sonny? Tell me, whar did you pick up that pepper trick?"

"Cuban scheme," explained Solano.

"In the Tin Years' war, my father and his friends threw the Spaniards off the trail a dozen times that way."

"Great idea," quoth Mr. Morgan. "I don't bear you boys the least ill-will fer it—but somebody's got tuh make good fer them dawgs, an' I reckon I'll have tuh be the German."

The travelers were accustomed to receiving notes by now and they were hardly surprised when Brockett, as the train moved out, received a small white envelope from the hand of the friendly sheriff.

"Came by mail this afternoon," cried the sheriff as the station receded into distance. "Note to me with it. Note said to give it to you as the train started. Good-bye, boys, and good luck go with you!"

And the note bore, in the same mysterious code, simply these directions: "2311 PH W VP Pos PO TO E 2311 PH PO TO TO HA TO PH TO HA TO W TO W TO PH AH PO SH."

"Hurry along and look out for trouble," Brockett translated. "I'd risk something that there's plenty of that article still ahead of us."

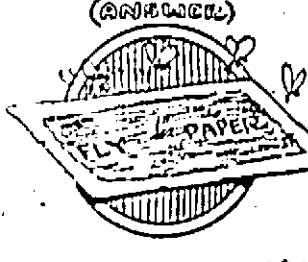

(To Be Continued)

Somewhat inappropriate, Rev. Dillon Bronson of Boston tells that once he went out to preach at a country appointment. It was a rainy day, and there were but nine people in the congregation. The hymn chosen to begin the service was, "What means this eager, anxious throng?"

WHERE TO GO FISHING

This is the name of an attractive little booklet, a supply of which has recently come to the Gazette Travel Bureau. Those to whom the balmy breezes of spring days bring thoughts of this fascinating sport and to those who are planning a summer vacation spent in the Northern Lake region, this will be especially interesting.

The different lakes and streams which abound in all kinds of fish are described in an entertaining way and all information that would be necessary in making arrangements for a fishing trip to this country is embodied in the booklet mentioned above. There are pictures of the different species of fish caught here with photographs of vacationists engaged in the sport and enchanting scenes in the lake region in summer. A map showing the location of lakes and streams described is given and also a copy of the fish laws for the season of 1912.

These and many other booklets taking up other parts of the country, beautiful to see and of interest to the traveler, are free to the public at

PLAYGROUND SITES AVAILABLE IN CITY

PROBLEM OF OBTAINING THEM
NOW BEING CONSIDERED
BY THE INTERESTED.

ARE FEW IN NUMBER

Location Important—Room for Expansion Essential—Advantage of Fair Grounds Site.

Interest in the proposal to secure and equip playgrounds for Janesville children, continues to grow, and friends of this movement in their behalf are now seriously considering one of the first steps to be taken in that direction, the selection and securing of suitable playground sites. A brief survey of the city reveals the fact that the number of lots or parcels of land available for the purpose are not at all numerous. On the contrary their scarcity is so apparent that a superficial investigation is moved to advise prompt action in securing possession of them. This fact is more easily comprehended when the requirements of a playground site are understood. The first of these requirements aside from that of space is location. Playgrounds should be centrally situated so that children need not walk themselves tired to reach them and visit them infrequently on that account. The effective radius of a small playground is not over a ten blocks. For that reason they should be carefully distributed and no city should rest content with less than one in each ward, though a beginning has to be made with less.

Should Not be Cramped.
Playgrounds should not be cramped for room. Experts have figured that a proper school playground should contain at least 30 square feet for each individual using it. In French schools 50 square feet is the rule. They should be built with a view to future enlargement upon a block which has vacant land, opposite or adjacent to it. In this way the demands of increasing population can be met with the greatest ease and at the least expense.

Need Baseball Diamond.
Arthur Leland, who has served as supervisor of playgrounds in Louisville, St. Paul, and Denver says that the playground must have a baseball diamond. The space devoted to it need be but a very meagre allowance, a three-quarter diamond upon which boys under sixteen can play, using balls which are not very lively. The rest of the playground must be protected from batted balls by a high fence.

A playground without a diamond, says Mr. Leland, "will be used almost entirely by girls and boys in skirts during the baseball season. Any vacant lot within ten blocks where baseball can be played will be more attractive to the boys."

Local Possibilities.
No attempt is made to enumerate in this place the plots of land in Janesville available for playgrounds. To do so would require long-continued and painstaking investigation, as the requirements named will suggest. Others to be considered are the willingness of the owner to lease or sell and agreement on terms. A few probable sites however, might be suggested.

Might Use Fairgrounds.
For the east side of the city a site which presents many attractive features is the "Fairgrounds," owned by the Janesville Driving Park Association. The western end in particular is conveniently situated with respect to a well populated section of the city. Its surface is level and high and would require little if any expense for grading, and there is room for indefinite expansion. The Park Association would very probably consent to the use of a portion of it for playground purposes for nominal cost at the most. This would not interfere with the fair and the fair would interfere with the use of the grounds for play for only a week or so. The use for play would tend to develop the appearance of the ground, leading to the planting of such trees and shrubs as would add to its beauty and usefulness. The place inside the truck could be properly graded for football and baseball, for tennis, and for general play purposes. The ground under such a development could be made to render an enormously increased return to the community. Why should it be given a privilege not accorded to the people of the community?

Because of the broken topography of a large part of the east side the sites available for playgrounds are necessarily few. Hills with steep slopes and ravines are not promising material. North of the ravine conditions are better, but the sites are too far away. The Jackson pasture lot at the corner of Milwaukee Avenue and Clarence street would be convenient, and even more so the spacious grounds of the Jefferson school.

Conditions on West Side.
Suitable playground locations west of the river are perhaps even more difficult to find than on the east side, that section being older and more densely populated. The city turned down perhaps the best opportunity it ever had to secure a playground site two or three years ago when the proposal to lease bonds for the purchase of the block bounded by Milwaukee street, Locust and South Academy streets for an athletic field was defeated. A corner of this block, but one block west of the Lincoln school, is still vacant and could perhaps be used for a small playground.

The school grounds of the city are in many instances, woefully small, but some of them might be equipped to good advantage for the want of better sites.

Experience in towns and cities that did not look far enough ahead teaches that the early duty of every local playground association should be to secure accurate and detailed information of every desirable site, including the useless places, such as swamps, marshes, and dumps.

Securing Apparatus.
Next in order after providing a suitable site for a playground is the selection and purchase of apparatus. In doing this a number of pitfalls should be avoided. A common mistake has been to put up apparatus that looked good or that seemed desirable in theory, instead of installing the material that was known to be serviceable and that experience has shown would be put to use. The apparatus should be popular and much used. Apparatus, however, scientifically devised will do nothing for the development of children if they can not be induced to go near it. It is better for the apparatus to wear out than rest out.

Another mistake has been to place full dependence on apparatus "home made." Some parts of the apparatus can be made thus to advantage. The equipment houses will quote as low prices as they can for reliable material because they expect business and are apt to realize how unlikely they are to get continued trade if they supply poor material.

The apparatus which children will actually use is principally that in which the act of falling comes in, such as tilts and teeter ladders, sliding poles and coats, swings, trapeze, and traveling rings.

The middle sized child wants to do something to show how great and brave, unaccomplished and generally enviable he is, and how much more so than any other boy. Partly for this reason horizontal bars and flying rings, vaulting horses and parallel bars should be provided.

Says the same writer concerning boyish traits: "If a boy does not do daring things and does not measure himself against other boys in games and in contests he will never grow to be a man. The chance once missed will never come back to him. This is why our education must include an opportunity to do difficult and dangerous feats."

Placing Equipment.
The playground equipment should be so distributed or grouped that it will discourage "gangs" monopolizing them for their own use. This can be accomplished by placing the apparatus in a fenced enclosure where it can be readily and effectively controlled, or by scattering it over the ground.

Under the first system members of a "gang" can use the apparatus as long as they observe the rules of fair play, but they ten minutes longer. Where the second method the members of the "gang" are so scattered that they can not maintain an organization.

Methods of Administration.
Administration of playgrounds is one of the first problems to be solved and for the enlightenment of those interested in the furthering of the movement forms of administration that have met with success elsewhere are quoted here as compiled in Mr. Merri's book:

1. Voluntary.
 - a. Local society or club working through a committee.
 - b. Several societies or clubs working through a joint committee.
 - c. A playground association made up of interested persons with committees for different departments of the work.
2. Board of Education.
 - a. A committee appointed by the Board to conduct summer playgrounds.
 - b. A department of playgrounds and recreation centers.
 - c. A department of hygiene.
3. Municipal.
 - a. A playground commission appointed by the mayor or city council.
 - b. The park department working through a superintendent or a committee.
 - c. The city council by delegating the work to any city department.
4. Combination.
 - a. A playground commission appointed by the mayor, supported by both city appropriations and private contributions.
 - b. A local playground association supported by both private contributions and city appropriations.
 - c. A local society or club with the assistance and co-operation of the Board of Education or the city council.

Kentucky Racing Session Opens.
Lexington, Ky., April 27.—Lexington is thronged with trainers, owners and lovers of fast horses, all here for the opening this afternoon of the spring meeting of the Kentucky Training Horse Breeders' Association. The meeting marks the opening of the racing season in Kentucky. The State Racing Commission has allotted Lexington eleven days, following which will come fifteen days of racing at Louisville and then a twenty-five days' meeting at Latonia.

Street Flusher Satisfactory.
The street flusher which was purchased by the city of Madison was tried out on East Main street one day this week by Street Superintendent Sullivan. It was found that the flusher left the pavement clean and in fine shape. It is planned to have the streets cleaned at an hour when not much water is being used for other purposes.

CELEBRATE NINETY- THIRD ANNIVERSARY OF ODD FELLOWSHIP

Program Given at Myers Theatre Last Night in Commemoration of Event Attended by Hundreds.

Members of the local lodges of Odd Fellows and Rebekahs, their families and friends, and visiting members from other local county lodges last night filled the lower floor and a large section of the balcony of the Myers theatre where a program was given commemorating the ninety-third anniversary of the founding of American Odd Fellows. An overture by the Odd Fellows orchestra, began the program, followed by the singing of the opening ode of the lodge, prayer by Chaplain J. P. Carlo, and the reading of the Grand Sire's Proclamation by Howard W. Lee.

Mayor James A. Fellers welcomed the visiting members on the behalf of the city as well as the Janesville Odd Fellows. He said that the city offered excellent facilities for a good time, it was willing to offer the best it had for the entertainment of its visitors. Its natural advantages were rare, its inducement to the home-seeker many, and he invited a thorough inspection. Janesville, he asserted was the champion Odd Fellows town of Wisconsin, its proportional membership is unequalled for Odd Fellowship had been made a study there.

A resume of the history of Odd Fellowship was given by Grand Master John Luchelinger of Monroe. He traced its beginning from the founding of the Manchester Union in England in 1745 to the founding of the American branch of Odd Fellowship by Thomas Wolfe and his four associates at Baltimore, April 26, 1819; the separation from the mother lodge in 1842, and the continuous and rapid development which has followed since until now Odd Fellows have lodges in every country, numbering over one and a half million in the United States alone. This marvelous growth, he said, had been due to the principles of Odd Fellowship; brotherly kindness, charity, fraternity, loyalty, and allegiance to law and order, and their practice by Odd Fellows.

Mrs. Emory Perry, President of the State Assembly of Rebekahs, referred with pleasure to her previous visits in Janesville and the hearty welcome always extended, and then outlined the fraternal relations of the Rebekahs to their associated lodge of Odd Fellows, characterizing them as mutual helpfulness and support. It was the idea of explaining why the name "Rebekah" had been chosen to designate the organization she told the biblical story, placing emphasis upon the virtues of willingness to help, hospitality, and readiness to obey God's commands, which Rebekah showed. The good Samaritan in modern life was the topic of the Rev. J. W. Laughlin. The Levites, he said, were those who lived unto themselves sufficient, extending no hand to assist those in need or distress. The Samaritans those who took pity on the unfortunate inspired them with new hope, and helped them to a fresh start in life. The spirit of "the good Samaritan" was written through the ritual of Odd Fellowship, and express in the lives of faithful members.

Interpersed with the addresses on the program were numbers of a highly entertaining nature. Little Miss Esther Barker gave a recitation in a very unaffected, realistic manner, and Miss Ruth Humphrey a humorous reading delivered in a very pleasing manner. The German Double Quartet sang a number of German "lieder" and were heartily cheered, the Odd Fellows Quartet also coming in for their share. The orchestra numbers were equally enjoyed.

A dance and reception was given at East Side Odd Fellows hall at the close of the program and was attended by a large number of the members of both lodges and their friends.

Gen. Buckner's Granddaughter Weds.
Louisville, Ky., April 27.—A wedding of note here today was that of Miss Gertrude Balknap, daughter of Mrs. Morris H. Balknap, and Ronald Carlo Lee of New York. The ceremony was performed this afternoon at the home of the bride's mother. The bride was given away by her grandfather, Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, the famous Confederate commander who is now in his ninetieth year.

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

MAKING ENGLISH CITIZENS OF FRENCHMEN.

By A. W. MACY.

After the fall of Quebec, in 1759, Canada passed into the possession of England. It had at that time a resident population of perhaps 100,000. A large percentage of these were Frenchmen, who could not understand English and knew nothing of English laws and customs. Yet in making the transfer neither the French nor the English took any account of this fact. The French king ceded the country to the English "in the most ample manner and form, without restriction;" the English king proclaimed the country to be English, and that all there was to it. There was no reservation of the French tenure of land. In all respects the inhabitants were to be British subjects, and to be treated as such. As a matter of fact this did not make much difference to the French Canadians, for it was hardly possible that their condition could be worse than it was already. Such an extraordinary proceeding — to transform a hundred thousand Frenchmen into English subjects by a stroke of the pen, without taking their welfare into account one way or the other.

A Permanent Benefit.

J. L. Southern, Clerk Eau Claire House, Eau Claire, Wis., reiterates his statement that Foley Kidney Pills cured him. He says: "Several years ago I wrote you of my remarkable cure by the use of Foley Kidney Pills. One of the worst features of my trouble was sleeplessness. Now to show the lasting benefit of Foley Kidney Pills, I am writing you to let you know that I have had no return of the kidney trouble and I sleep soundly. I have recommended Foley Kidney Pills to lots of people who report the great good they do them." Badger Drug Co.

Health Week in England.
London, April 27.—As the culmination of a widespread public movement launched some time ago, England is to observe her first national health week during the seven days beginning tomorrow. While in country villages there may be only a single sermon on Sunday, in the larger communities there will be a full week's program, consisting of lectures, exhibitions, meetings of voluntary health societies and a general inspection of factories and workshops.

Mrs. Wm. Henning, 281 Morris St., Fond du Lac, Wis., tells how Foley's Honey and Tar Compound cured her. "I suffered with a very severe cold, but after taking Foley's Honey and Tar Compound my cold got better, and I also gave it to my daughter with the same good results. I am glad to recommend it to all people who suffer with coughs and colds." Badger Drug Co.
